TRIBUNE WRITER DESCRIBES WAR ON FINNISH LINE

9 Days of Shelling Rips Forest.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ON THE MANNERHEIM LINE, Finland, Dec. 14.—After two days of observation of the Finns' front line positions in the Mannerheim line, the impression is gained that Finland's chances of holding off the Red army indefinitely are improving daily.

Today a lieutenant colonel in the Taipaleenjoki [Passage river] sector of the Karelian isthmus defenses northwest of Leningrad permitted a small group of American correspondents to visit the front line trenches on the bank of the river during a bombardment of the Finnish positions, which has been continuous since Dec. 6.

Snow Blackened by Blasts.

This special favor was obtained after The Tribune correspondent had accused members of the Finnish staff of trying to keep details of their war a secret, like a child playing with a new Christmas toy. This seemed to tickle the officers, who said that they would permit us to go as far forward as our nerve would permit.

After a two mile walk thru a young pine forest whose trees had been ripped and torn by nine days of shelling and whose snow was blackened and burned by explosives and was dotted with shell holes, we arrived at a point where we took turns watching thru a periscope and saw a soviet battery being put in position three miles away.

Finns Save Their Shells.

Altho soviet shells were bursting regularly in this forest, the Finnish artillery did not reply. The sector commander declared the Finns were saving their shells until they could use them with effect.

"It is evident that the soviet artillery doesn't amount to much," an officer asserted. "They are just wasting their ammunition. During the various engagements in this three mile sector of the lines we estimate we have caused the Russians 2,000 casualties, while ours are only a few tens. Thus far they have succeeded only in damaging a small section of our forest land.

Held to No Gain.

"This sector has been the scene of the heaviest fighting in the entire isthmus, but since their first attack they have failed to gain an additional yard of our territory. Thus far only the outposts of the Mannerheim line have been contacted by the Russians and our main troops haven't yet been needed."

At the point from where we watched the soviet bombardment the Taipaleenjoki enters Lake Ladoga. From the lake the Reds, using specially constructed supertugboats on which were mounted two or four heavy guns, have attempted to shell the Finns from their flank. When Lake Ladoga is covered with fog the soviet boats have been able to continue their fire. But when the fog lifted for a moment yesterday the Finnish artillery sank one boat and forced another to run ashore after a direct hit. A third boat ran out of view.

Have No Fear of Future.

The Taipaleenjoki's swift current is not yet covered with ice and the stream is more than 200 yards wide. Considering the poorly prepared soviet attacks, the poorly functioning artillery, and the wretched condition of the prisoners captured every day, the Finns say they do not fear any future offensives of the Red army.

A sergeant who was my guide thru the trenches is a paper mill specialist, who worked for seven years in America, then returned to Finland during the depression. He said the Finnish soldiers are comfortably housed and well fed, but the ...nces and shellfire had disturbed their sleep so that they are busy constructing deep dugouts in the forest.

The Finns, he continued, enjoyed penetrating the soviet lines during the night and said that one member of his battalion a few nights ago had volunteered to determine the number of soviet guns in a battery. Later when he returned with the information his commander asked how he had managed to count them, and he

Mike Carrozzo Breaks City's Pay Boost Ban

Ten days ago, when it started work on the 1940 city budget, the city council finance committee pledged itself to grant no wage increases. Last night Michael Carrozzo, boss of the street laborers' union, walked into the committee's meeting and demanded $597,797 in wage increases for his men. When he left the meeting an hour later he had exacted a promise that his union would get a pay boost totaling $154,600.

"The increase goes or no street work next year," he warned as he left.

During his session with the committee Carrozzo sat with his lieutenant, Anthony D'Andrea, head of the construction laborers' union. D'Andrea complained that his union had not received scale wages while other unions had.

O. K. to Reduce Employés.

"It would have meant fewer employés," said Ald. J. M. Arvey [24th], chairman of the committee.

"That's O. K. with us," D'Andrea retorted. "We want scale."

The compromise affects 2,691 laborers in the street and water departments. As examples of some of the increases, 1,300 water department laborers now getting a daily wage of $7.76, compared with the union scale of $8.20, will receive $8 under last night's agreement; 80 city asphalt rakers now getting $8 will get the union rate of $10.60, and 400 street laborers now paid $7.20 will get the union scale of $8.20.

Ald. Arvey said the increase will not be added on to the 1940 budget, but must be absorbed by the departments hiring the men under the present estimated appropriations.

"This really isn't a pay increase," said Arvey. "Two years ago we returned other union employés to the scale they receive outside the city hall and we didn't return the street workers. There are too many of them. Carrozzo went along with us. He is pretty belligerent about it now."

Elevator Chief Gets Jolt.

Carrozzo is president of the International Hod Carriers, Builders, and Common Laborers' district council, which includes the Street Maintenance Employés union, local 1001; the Asphalt, Resurfacing, and Road Builders union, local 1002, and several other groups.

Mathew Taylor, head of the elevator operators' and starters' union, received a jolt when he demanded pay raises and new operators to cost an additional $32,170. He said city hall operators now getting $175 a month should get $200.

Theodore L. O'Grady, business agent for the union, admitted the requested scale was higher than that paid outside the city hall.

INDIANA PRISON MAY GET RADIO IF INMATES PAY

Warden Alfred F. Dowd said yesterday that the Indiana prison at Michigan City will be equipped thruout with radio receiving facilities if the inmates are willing to pay the cost. At present the prisoners have little opportunity to listen to broadcasts.

The suggestion for a prisonwide system was made by the inmates. The warden took the request to the prison trustees, who had no objection except that there is no fund to pay for the installation.

"Now it's up to the inmates," Dowd said. "We are willing to install a system with a head set for each cell if they pay the dollar or two apiece that this will cost. Their educational council is considering the matter."

Joliet and Stateville prisons in Illinois are equipped with radio, paid for by the state. There is a loud speaker in each cell block, all operated from a central control room. The Illinois prisoners are not allowed to listen to crime programs.

The Long Arm of Law Gets Even Longer

Everybody has heard of the long arm of the law. Well, Evanston has two brand new ones. They're to be used against overtime parkers and also to make life easier for overworked policemen for whom overtime parkers make life miserable and vice versa.

For years Evanston policemen went around on foot putting white chalk marks on the tires of parked autos. [That's the system by which policemen keep track of cars and tell which ones have been parked too long.] Then Evanston introduced two motorcycles for use in parking law enforcement.

That Still Was Work.

This was much better than the old way, but it meant some work for the policemen because they either had to climb off and on their motorcycles to put the chalk marks on the auto tires or bend over and use a stick to which chalk was attached.

So now some inventive genius has thought of the "arms." They're two thin metal poles, one 22 inches long and the other 55 inches long. The tip of each holds a piece of white chalk.

Here's how they work:

Suppose a police motorcycle is driven alongside a car parked parallel with the curb. A chalky symbol is desired on the left rear tire. The policeman simply presses a button and the 22 inch "arm" shoots out of a pocket attachment on the right side of the motorcycle. It nips greedily at the automobile tire, its chalk end leaving the desired mark—a short white line—on the tire.

Here's a Different Problem.

But suppose, now, that the policeman finds a car parked diagonally. This offers a different problem, especially if other cars are parked the same way, for the motorcycle cannot get between them. But here is where the 55 inch "arm" shoots out of a pocket and leaves a sliding white mark on the left rear tire.

The new system has started out smoothly enough and the auto markers, if not the motorists, are very pleased with it.

Evanston policemen boasted last night they can mark one car a second. And, they added, they can use blue, yellow, red, or green chalk instead of the white, if they want to.

BRITISH SPEED HUNT FOR OTHER POCKET CRAFT

Seek Admiral Scheer and Deutschland.

LONDON, Dec. 14 (AP).—Britain's admiralty tonight poured mighty men o' war into a redoubled hunt for the two German pocket battleships still at sea as it counted out the troublesome raider Admiral Graf Spee, lying crippled in Montevideo harbor with a reinforced British warship patrol on guard outside. The raiders sought are the Deutschland and the Admiral Scheer.

The admiralty announced the two British light cruisers, Ajax and Achilles, which chased the Graf Spee into the neutral refuge late last night, had been strongly reinforced. At the same time authoritative sources disclosed that the battle cruiser Renown, mounting six 15-inch guns and twelve 4-inch guns and displacing around 37,000 tons fully loaded, and the 22,000 ton aircraft carrier Ark Royal, have reached waters near Cape Town, South Africa, to hunt the raiding German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer.

Press Hunt for Deutschland.

Patrols of British men o' war also were sweeping the North Atlantic on the chance of catching the German pocket battleship Deutschland, and Royal Air Force squadrons searched the North sea and Northwest German estuaries and islands.

Raiding activities by the Admiral Scheer have been reported off South Africa. Naval sources, however, said the three pocket battleships, with identical specifications, had changed names frequently and that it was hard to distinguish between them.

The elation of the British over "bottling up" of the Graf Spee overshadowed the loss of 120 men aboard the 1,375 ton British destroyer Duchess, sunk yesterday in a collision with an unidentified warship. Only one officer and 22 men were saved.

The 202 ton British minesweeper William Hallett struck a mine today and sank with the loss of all but one of her crew of nine.

Reveal 2 More Ship Losses.

The British steamer Stanwood, 4,158 tons, tonight was disclosed to have sunk Sunday in Falmouth harbor while attempting to extinguish a fire in her hold. Two were killed.

The Swedish steamer Algol sank after her crew was taken off by Swedish warships sent to her assistance, it was learned today. The steamer was reported yesterday to have struck a mine in the straits between Denmark and Sweden.

Against these losses was the admiralty's announcement that the submarine which had allowed the German liner Bremen to steam safely to Germany had sunk a German submarine and torpedoed a cruiser.

[The German high command acknowledged there had been "an underwater explosion near one light cruiser." It called the damage "unimportant."]

The loss of life aboard the Duchess was outranked only by the 786 men killed aboard the battleship Royal Oak, sunk at Scapa Flow, the 578 lost when the aircraft carrier Courageous was sunk, and the 265 killed in the sinking of the armed merchantman Rawalpindi. The William Hallett was the sixth British minesweeper to be sunk.

Victory Hailed by Chamberlain.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain called the feat of the two six inch gun cruisers Achilles and Ajax in driving the Graf Spee to shelter a "gallant action," especially since it was accomplished after the more powerful British cruiser Exeter had been crippled. He said the battle probably had freed the South Atlantic from depredations of the Graf Spee.

Both Chamberlain and the admiralty denied German charges that the British cruisers had used mustard gas shells. No officials, however, gave any

London, Berlin Claim Victory in Aerial Battle

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Dec. 15, Friday (AP).—British airmen just returned from a smashing air battle over the North sea reported today they had seen a section of the German fleet near the scene of the world war battle of Jutland.

"Reconnaissance flyers said they saw a Nazi battleship, a cruiser, and some destroyers and a submarine," the air ministry announced. It was the first report of such a strong penetration of the North sea by German naval forces. The warships took part in a German counterattack on the British planes. A dispatch from Oslo reported 60 explosions sounding like gunfire were heard yesterday near Jutland.

British and German aircraft yesterday fought over Heligoland bay in the North sea just off the coast of Germany. The English claimed they shot down four German planes while losing three themselves. The Germans asserted they downed eight British planes with the loss of only one of their own. Here are the two versions:

THE GERMAN VERSION

BERLIN, Dec. 15, Friday (AP).—German pursuit planes shot down 10 of 20 British attackers north of the Frisian islands, the German high command reported today.

Its communique acknowledged that one German plane was forced down in what is described as activity of British air bombers thruout yesterday along the German North sea coast.

"A single British bomber which approached the air base at Borkum yesterday without dropping bombs was chased off by our air defense," it said.

"Two further British fighting planes tried to attack the island of Sylt. All four bombs dropped fell into the sea outside the island.

"There was a larger scale air fight in the afternoon hours which developed out of an attack by British fighters in the region north of the Frisian islands.

"German pursuit craft shot down 10 of 20 attackers. One German plane was forced to descend to the sea.

"No special events in the west."

WHAT THE BRITISH SAY

LONDON, Dec. 14 (AP).—The air ministry tonight announced four German Messerschmitt fighting planes and three British fighters had been shot down in fierce air battles over Heligoland bay "in the last 24 hours."

The announcement said "considerable forces of the Royal Air Force have been operating over the North Sea in the last 24 hours."

[Heligoland bay provides the North sea outlet for two of Germany's largest naval bases, Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven, as well as Bremerhaven, port to which the German liner Bremen fled.]

The operations, the air ministry said, included a wide search for enemy ships and submarines and close reconnaissance of the estuaries and islands of northwest Germany.

Gargles Sore Throat While Battle Rages

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 14 (AP).—Vivid eyewitness stories of the Admiral Graf Spee's fight with British cruisers were told tonight by members of a group of 62 British seamen who were prisoners directly under one of the 11 inch gun turrets while the Admiral Graf Spee threw steel at her attackers.

Freed of their marine prison—several after weeks of confinement—the seamen described how they counted hits by British guns and cheered for the attacking cruisers, at the same time realizing they were doomed if the Admiral Graf Spee sank, because the doors of their steel cells had been barred when the action began.

One of the best accounts of the sea fight was told by a quiet mannered officer of the British steamer Doric Star, who was taken prisoner before his ship was sunk by the Admiral Graf Spee off the coast of Africa on Dec. 4.

The prisoners were awakened at 6

URUGUAY GIVES RAIDER TIME TO MAKE REPAIRS

English Keep Watch on Damaged Vessel.

(Radiophotos on back page.)

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 14 (AP).—The shell battered German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, playing a dangerous game of cat and mouse with a gathering British battle fleet, won tonight Uruguayan permission to remain in this neutral port until she can repair the damage suffered in the war's first great sea fight.

The Uruguayan foreign minister, Alberto Guani, tonight announced that, "in accordance with the Uruguayan neutrality law and international law," the Admiral Graf Spee could stay in Montevideo harbor, on request of the German government, pending repairs.

The announcement was made shortly before the 24 hour time limit, normally permitted for the stay of a belligerent ship, would have expired at midnight [9:30 p. m., Chicago time].

Extensive Repairs Needed.

Guani declined to say how long this extension of time would run, but explained that the German captain, Hans Langsdorff, would be given sufficient time to make his warcraft seaworthy. Close inspection of the crippled ship indicated the need of extensive repairs.

The Uruguayan decision meant the Admiral Graf Spee, still at anchor in the bay with her 36 dead and 60 wounded on board, need not immediately attempt a suicidal dash thru the reënforced British warship patrol outside the harbor.

Meanwhile, the British cruiser Exeter, damaged and forced out of the battle which drove the Admiral Graf Spee to refuge here last night, was approaching the Argentine naval base at Puerto Belgrano, in Bahia Blanca, seeking to drydock for repairs. One hundred hospital beds were prepared there for her wounded. The base is 120 miles southwest of Buenos Aires.

Reports reaching Buenos Aires from points along the Argentine Atlantic coast said the Exeter was badly hit, making barely 14 knots—less than half her normal speed.

Surrender 62 British Seamen.

Shortly after the crippled German floating fortress had surrendered 62 British seamen taken from nine raided merchantmen, British diplomatic authorities indicated that the 10,000 ton British cruiser Cumberland had joined the death watch flotilla outside the harbor.

The same sources also said that it was very likely the 37,000 ton battle cruiser Renown and the 22,000 ton aircraft carrier Ark Royal would rush here from South African waters.

In Buenos Aires official Argentine sources said they understood that the 26,500 ton French battleship Dunkerque was steaming toward the Platte river to join the watch over the Admiral Graf Spee.

French Warship, Too.

The Dunkerque is rated by naval experts as one of the five British and French warships capable of dealing alone with the German pocket battleship. Carrying eight 13-inch guns as main armament, she has a speed of 29.5 knots and is protected by 14 inch armor.

Already the light cruisers Ajax and Achilles, which drove the Admiral Graf Spee into this harbor after a daylong battle yesterday, were on watch.

Reports from the Ajax and Achilles said that they had no dead and only a few wounded.

The imprisoned British seamen, who had huddled helplessly in the brig of the warship while her German crew fought for 14 hours yesterday, were turned loose at 6:45 p. m. [3:15 p. m., Chicago time].

Five Merchant Captains.

Headed by five merchant captains, taken from British ships by the raider, the men mounted the same gangplank over which Capt. Langsdorff of the Admiral Graf Spee a half hour earlier had led a half dozen smartly clad German officers on his way to make a formal call in port.

The imprisoned captains were identified as Brown of the S. S. Huntsman,

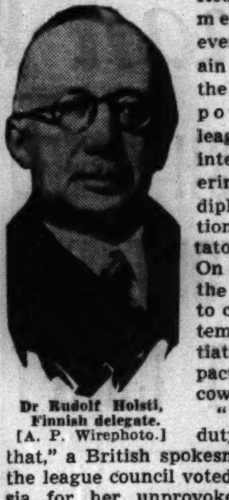
RUSSIA THROWN OUT OF LEAGUE FOR MAKING WAR

Britain and France to Keep Ties with Reds.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 14.—The league of nations today expelled Red Russia as a member. However, Great Britain and France, the two greatest powers in the league, have no intention of severing their own diplomatic relations with Dictator Josef Stalin. On the contrary, the British plan to continue to attempt to negotiate a new trade pact with Moscow.



Dr Rudolf Holsti, Finnish delegate.
[A. P. Wirephoto.]

"We did our duty, and that's that," a British spokesman said after the league council voted to expel Russia for her unprovoked aggression against Finland. "We are not going to do anything to aggravate the situation."

Daladier Favors Break.

Premier Edouard Daladier of France was reported to have been in favor of breaking relations with Russia, but the British persuaded him it would be the wrong course to take so long as the two nations were at war with Germany. The French would like to get the soviet embassy out of Paris, for they regard it as the propaganda distribution center for communists in France.

Seven of the fifteen members of the league council voted to oust Russia. In addition to Britain and France, they were Bolivia, the Union of South Africa, Egypt, the Dominican republic, and Belgium.

Four nations—China, Greece, Finland, and Jugo-Slavia — abstained. This maneuver was resorted to because a unanimous vote was required to expel Moscow.

Three nations were absent. Russia, until her banishment, was the fifteenth member of the council. She took no part in the deliberations because she was accused of aggression.

Assembly Condemns Reds.

Before the council met, the assembly of 43 nations voted to condemn the soviet as an aggressor. Nine nations abstained from the voting. They were the three Scandinavian nations, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark; three Baltic countries, Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia; Switzerland, China, and Bulgaria.

It was the first expulsion in the league history. A telegram informing Russia of the league's action was sent to the Kremlin tonight.

The British said on Sunday they did not believe it possible to get the nations friendly to Russia, or which felt themselves to be menaced by the Reds, to agree to expulsion. However, it was apparent to observers that the minor powers fell into line just as they always have when Britain and France turned on the heat.

The British did not want to risk antagonizing Russia when Finland first asked for league assistance. However, they were said to have been forced by world opinion to take the steps provided by the league covenant. The British, it was said, hope to forget about the ouster as quickly as possible. The British press was reported to have been instructed to play down the story so as not to irk Stalin any more than necessary.

Officials Vague on Aid.

China abstained from the voting because of the help she has been getting from Russia in the war with Japan. Jugo-Slavia and Greece did not want to arouse Russia's anger, and the Finnish delegate, Dr. Rudolf Holsti, said his country did not want to act as prosecutor and judge at the same time.

Altho the league was organized to keep the peace in Europe by threatening joint action against any aggressor, officials of the organization were vague as to what Finland will get out of today's action.

The ouster resolution condemned Russia and appealed to individual league members to provide Finland "with such material and humanitarian assistance as is in their power," but no joint committee was set up to provide this aid.

The league's technical organization may send medical supplies and doctors, but neutral Switzerland will not permit Geneva to become a clearing house for shipments of arms or airplanes to Finland. There was no mention of economic penalties such as were applied against Italy in the Ethiopian war.

It seemed to observers that Finland probably will get no more and no less assistance than she would have if the league had not existed.

Britain wanted to help Finland and was reported to have sent 30 planes to the invaded nation, but considered a trade deal with Moscow as a move which may prevent Germany from buying supplies from Russia.

Latin American nations urged measures be taken against Russia from the beginning, but European powers which might suffer hastily abandoned league ideals when the test came.

GERMANY, REDS RATIFY TREATY FIXING BORDER

BERLIN, Dec. 14 (AP).—The German-Russian friendship and boundary treaty initialed Sept. 28 was ratified here today by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Alexander Schkvarzev, Russian ambassador to Berlin.

The accord contained agreement on a mutual German-Russian border in conquered Poland, wiping that nation off the map, and rejected any interference by third powers in the settlement.

The treaty was part of a three-sided agreement between the two countries. Under the other parts, Germany and Russia were put side by side in urging France and Britain to end their war against Germany and, should they refuse, in coöperating to restore peace, and also to develop their economic relations.

SENTENCE FIRST IRISH TERRORISTS OF IRA TO DEATH

BIRMINGHAM, England, Dec. 14 (AP).—Bombs exploded in two movie theaters tonight several hours after a Birmingham court had pronounced the first death sentences in the campaign of terror by the anti-British Irish Republican army. Damage was slight and no one was injured. In another explosion in a telephone factory in Nottingham late tonight one man was believed to have been killed.

Peter Barnes, 32, and James Richards, 29, were sentenced to death for a bombing at Coventry on Aug. 25 in which five persons were killed.

Nine Days of Artillery Fire Rips Forest.

said he had marked a large cross on each gun with chalk.

Ilmari Salminen, an Olympic 10 kilometer [6.2 miles] champion; Jussi Kurikkala, an Olympic ski runner, and Sulo Kolkka, chief of the press bureau of Finland's Olympic games committee, were serving as ordinary soldiers in the trenches we visited. The officers of the staff included the millionaire owners of cellulose and paper mills and other industrial leaders who have volunteered and who have been called into active service, revealing that Finland's army also is the most democratic military organization in Europe.

Discussing the failure of the soviet attacks, one front line officer declared, "Our machine gunners are relieved every two hours during a battle. We discovered that the mass slaughter of the Russian troops, which the Reds force upon us, affects the nerves of our men operating the automatic weapons for dealing death. With machine guns it is an awful business for any one to stand it for more than a very short period.

"The heaviest fighting took place on the 6th, 9th, 10th, and 11th of this month. During the later engagements companies of Russians attempted to advance toward our lines. Scurrying behind the protection of their tanks, which would convoy them forward for a short distance, the tanks then would try to return to obtain another group. The Finnish marksmen decimated the Russian troops and destroyed between 35 and 45 tanks in this three mile sector.

"It also is evident that the soviet officers are inexperienced and not sufficiently trained or educated for their task. When we have forced them to retreat we have heard the sound of machine guns firing upon them from behind their own lines."

British to Light Up Streets; Blackout to Be Reduced

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The blackout will be reduced in Great Britain soon, it was announced tonight. Next week street lighting systems will be installed except in eastern and southern England.

GERMAN PATROLS STRIKE AT FRENCH LINES THIRD DAY

PARIS, Dec. 14 (AP).—For the third successive day German patrols in increasing numbers today struck at French advance lines in the center of the northern flank of the western front.

The French communique, usually reserved, tonight referred to fighting on the front as "rather sharp engagements between reconnaissance units." The attacks developed along a 20 mile sector taking in the western foothills of the Vosges mountains and the valley of the Blies river. This sector is just east of the Saar river, where sharp fighting took place 48 hours ago. The day communique had said there was "patrol activity along the entire central part of the front from the Moselle [river] to the Rhine [river]."

[The German high command also found activity increasing and said that "aside from slight enemy artillery annoyance fire in the region before the lines between the Moselle and the Rhine, there was livelier scouting activity. At several points prisoners could again be taken."] you don't sit on a peg and ask for it over a counter. And you'll find it doesn't cost any more in a place where they know how to cook it—than in all the other places where they don't.

At least that's what Tom told me last Christmas after he'd seen some of the ties Madge gave Harry. So let's go over to Capper & Capper's . . . Tom says they haven't got anything 'fantastic' . . . and they wouldn't let you buy it if they had."

It is true that we know almost nothing about layettes or lingerie (we wish we knew more) but in our chosen field—of things that particular men like to wear—we can't help feeling that we know our stuff—because so many particular men come here. So if you want to buy him something—without that "Tea-Shoppe Taint" we really think you're safe in coming here. And we can assure you it won't cost you any more—perhaps even less.

FINNS RETREAT BEFORE RUSSIAN PUSH IN ARCTIC

Burn Towns; Frozen River Mined by Norway.

KIRKENES, Norway [at the Finnish Northern Frontier], Dec. 14 (AP)—Norwegians mined the frozen Pasvik [Pacific] river as a precautionary defense measure tonight as Russian troops, invading the Finnish nickel mining district just across the frontier river, neared the burning town of Salmijaervi.

Four other towns in the region—Kolosjoki, Tullevi, Koivolahti, and Kovoranta—all were ablaze. The entire district from Boris-Glev to Salmijaervi was covered with black smoke. The Petsamo district is a narrow corridor of Finnish territory on the Arctic ocean. Finland at this point is scarcely 30 miles wide.

Will Dynamite Mines.

Small Finnish detachments remained behind to dynamite the rich nickel mines around Salmijaervi tonight when the Russians were expected to arrive. Salmijaervi is close to the Norwegian border, about 32 miles southwest of the Finnish arctic port of Liinamahari.

[Dispatches received at Bergen tonight from the Finnish border said two violent explosions were heard at Salmijaervi at 9 p. m. It was presumed the Finns had blown up the nickel mines preparatory to abandoning the region. Some of the mining properties belong to the International Nickel Company of Canada.]

Finnish troops were withdrawing in good order, most of them in lorries. It could not be learned where they were planning to make a stand against the Russian advance.

Russian Bombers Appear.

As long as they follow the arctic highway the Russians have the advantage of fairly level terrain for about 80 miles southwest to Toermanen, but the Finns are far more familiar with the region.

There was no information as to the strength of the Russian force penetrating Finland from the northeast.

Three Russian bombing planes circled over Salmijaervi this morning and were greeted by heavy antiaircraft and machine gun fire which continued into the afternoon.

Spearhead 75 Miles Inland.

MOSCOW, Dec. 15, Friday (AP).—Red army headquarters declared today a spearhead had been driven to a point 75 miles across Finland near the Arctic circle, or more than a third of the way to the Gulf of Bothnia and Sweden.

The communique said only that the advance had been made in the Ukhta area. However, previous operations in the same area have resulted in the reported occupation of Salla and Markajaervi in a drive to cut Finland in two.

An advance of 75 miles from the soviet border in that section would place the Red army spearhead only about 15 miles from Kemijaervi, the terminal of the railroad which runs for 110 miles in a southwesterly direction to Kemi, on the Gulf of Bothnia.

On the southern end of the eastern front, the communique said, the villages of Sjuskujaervi [Syskyjaervi], 10 miles northeast of Lake Ladoga; Sulkulampi, and Hippola had been occupied.

Fog and unfavorable weather made only scouting flights possible, the communique said.

Reds Retreat in East.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Finnish army communique asserted tonight that an extensive area had been recaptured by the Finns in the vicinity of Tolvajaervi and the Russian invaders forced to retreat.

[Tolvajaeri is approximately 40 miles west of Finland's eastern frontier and the same distance north of Lake Ladoga.]

The communique declared that more Russian tanks had been captured.

It accused the invaders of using gas in fighting at Suomussalmi, 20 miles inside Finland at almost the midpoint of the eastern frontier, but added that the gas was largely ineffective.

The Finnish Communique.

The communique follows:

"Land—On the Karelian isthmus on Dec. 13 localized fighting took place during which the enemy lost among other things 11 tanks. On the eastern front the enemy continued unsuccessful in attack.

"Attacks supported by armored cars have been fierce, especially in the vicinity of Koirinoja.

"At Suomussalmi the Russians employed gas.

"At Tolvajaervi our counterattacks were driven to a successful conclusion and on the evening of Dec. 13 it was possible to determine that during a fierce three day battle two Russian regiments were almost completely annihilated. The enemy's total losses were vast. The area of Tolvajaervi now is in our possession and our forces are pursuing the retreating enemy.

Return Naval Fire.

"Sea—Enemy naval forces on Dec. 13 bombed batteries on Koivisto Island. Our batteries returned fire and in addition supported land forces, destroying among other things a major enemy battery. Our artillery fire forced the enemy naval forces to retreat.

"Air—Owing to bad weather on Dec. 13 both the enemy and our own air activity were at a minimum. In northern Finland our forces shot down an enemy plane. In addition, in the vicinity of Espoo, there has been found destroyed an enemy bombing plane which apparently participated in the bombing of Helsingfors [at the start of the war]."

HE SWALLOWED HIS MEDICINE IN THICK OF BATTLE

Briton Aboard Spee Tells of Sea Fight.

o'clock in the morning, he said, by cannonading.

"We knew what that sound meant," he said, "and we knew it was serious when the guards of our quarters locked and barred the doors and left to go to their battle stations.

"As the battle progressed most of us realized a British victory might mean our death, but nevertheless there was singing and cheering for the attackers.

"Altogether, we counted 17 hits by British shells on the Admiral Graf Spee in the encounters that day.

"Probably you won't believe this, but several men who were shaving when the cannonading began went on and finished the job.

"I had a sore throat and was gargling medicine when we had a British visitor—a piece of a shell which had exploded outside tore its way into our quarters without hurting any one.

"But I swallowed all the medicine!

"Our confinement area was directly under one of the 11 inch gun turrets. Every time a shot was fired it seemed as if the whole roof had collapsed over us.

Says Germans Were Young.

"The grandest news we ever had was when an officer came down last night and told us: 'Gentlemen, the war is over for you. We just entered the Montevideo harbor.'"

The Doric Star officer, describing his experiences with the German crew, said most of them were young. "I don't think they ever considered the possibility of having to fight another warship," he said. "They seemed to think their only job was sinking freighters. That probably is one reason why light cruisers were able to damage the Admiral Graf Spee and force her to flee."

Capt. Patrick G. G. Dove of the tanker Africa Shell, sunk on Oct. 7 by the Admiral Graf Spee in a position which Dove said was within Portuguese waters, described how the commander of the Admiral Graf Spee told him just before the prisoners were released:

"The cruisers made a gallant fight. When people fight like that, personal enmity is lost."

Wishes Him Good Luck.

Dove said the first officer of the pocket battleship then wished him good luck and added:

"Those British are hard."

The British seamen were taken from nine merchantmen during the weeks the Admiral Graf Spee raided shipping lanes. They ranged in age from a man 72 years old to youths who appeared less than 15. They left the German warship in a tugboat, under the direction of British legation officials.

BROWDER HISSED AS HE O. K.'S REDS' WAR ON FINLAND

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 14 (AP). — Speaking in a lecture hall not completely freed of the rank odor of a makeshift stench bomb, Earl Browder, communist leader, told more than 600 Massachusetts Institute of Technology students today that the league of nations had "risen from the tomb" only because its action meant preparation for the "holy war" against Russia.

Students inside cheered and whistled at his reference to the league, which today expelled Russia from membership. They hissed and jeered as he referred to Russia's invasion of Finland as necessary, because Finland "refused to guarantee the safety of Leningrad."

BIG GERMAN LINER SAILS IN EFFORT TO RUN BLOCKADE

Loaded with Oil, Columbus Leaves Mexico.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Dec. 14 (AP).—The German liner Columbus, fueled and provisioned for a 50 day voyage, slipped out to sea today apparently attempting to dodge British warships on the high seas and run the British and French blockade to Germany.

A rich war prize if captured at sea, the 32,581 ton liner had been in Vera Cruz since Sept. 4, the day after Britain declared war.

Efforts to keep her departure secret were made because of British warships patroling gulf and Caribbean waters. The Columbus received clearing papers for Oslo, Norway, yesterday. Before dawn she shifted her anchorage and by 10 a. m. was outside Mexican waters.

Carries 20,000 Barrels of Oil.

There was some conjecture that she might head first for Tampico, Havana, or some gulf port in the United States, but it was believed generally that she would try to reach Germany.

In addition there was talk that the vessel might be used to provision German submarines or other craft at sea. The Columbus had taken on more than 20,000 barrels of fuel oil in the last week.

The departure of the Columbus will undoubtedly arouse strenuous British efforts to capture her as she is the third largest vessel in the German merchant marine. Only the Europa and Bremen are larger.

Built in Danzig in 1922, the liner has been kept in excellent condition through constant refurbishings and alterations.

Known to Americans.

Known to thousands of Americans for her service in the New York-European and West Indies cruise trade, she is equipped with outdoor swimming pools, has nine decks, and a speed of 20 knots. She is 749 feet long, has a beam of 83 feet, and a depth of 43 feet.

She carries a normal crew of 730 under the command of Capt. Wilhelm Daehne, one of Germany's best known and most popular masters.

A few hours before the Columbus departed another German vessel, the 4,353 ton freighter Arauca, cleared Vera Cruz with a cargo of nitrates, crude oil, fiber, and other commodities consigned to New Orleans. Departure of the two ships left only one German vessel, the 4,174 ton Hamelin, of the numerous German ships which took refuge in Vera Cruz when war started.

A usually well informed source in Buenos Aires reported that all German merchantmen caught in neutral ports had been ordered to try to get home and that the German navy was planning a convoy system to guard against British and French raiders.

The flagship of the German merchant fleet, the liner Bremen, reached Germany safely Tuesday from Murmansk, soviet Arctic port. The liner New York and other smaller German vessels had preceded her in slipping home from the same port.

Three German ships which tried to get home from South Africa were captured or scuttled by their own crews, and at least one which left South America, the Cap Norte, fell into British hands.

When war started there were 72 German ships in South and Central American ports.

Goes to Sea

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

KILLED BY SUBURBAN TRAIN.

A man tentatively identified as Henry Dale, about 50 years old, a coal hiker, was fatally injured last night by a North Western railroad suburban train near the Mayfair station, in the neighborhood of 4300 Cullom avenue. He died early today in the Belmont hospital.

ASSERTS FRANCE ADOPTS HITLER'S METHODS IN WAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 14.—France is adopting Adolf Hitler's method to win the war, Jean Giraudoux, French commissioner of information, told members of the American club at a luncheon today by way of explaining military inactivity.

He said the method produces psychological decomposition of the ... and makes it ready for ... before starting military action.

"Such is Hitler's way," ... "We are fighting this kind of ... too, and I think we are ... doing."

Paul Reynaud, finance minister, ... the chamber of deputies ... that victory depended upon ... in a certain measure totalitarian ... nomic and financial policies.

GERMANS CHARGE SPEE IS A VICTIM OF MUSTARD GAS

Demand Investigation by Neutral Commission.

BERLIN, Dec. 14 (AP).—German authorities, convinced that the raiding pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was a victim of British mustard gas in yesterday's battle with three cruisers, tonight said they would invite a neutral commission to substantiate the charge that gas was used.

The Germans based their charges on reports received late tonight from the German minister in Montevideo. Previously the gas charges were made by DNB, official German news agency, and officials had refused to give them formal support.

Believe Shells Contained Gas.

But authorities later said they believed the gas was contained in explosive shells so timed as to explode only after the projectile had pierced armor and entered the interior of the ship. They said such shells would be more effective in putting a battleship crew out of action than a dozen ordinary shells.

[The gas charges were vigorously denied by British government ministers.]

Loud ejaculations of "What do you think of that?" were heard everywhere as Berlin newspapers exulted over the Admiral Graf Spee's "heroic action" in "fighting down" three British cruisers.

The action off Uruguay was described as the second German sea victory in a few days—the first, the successful return home of the great liner Bremen from Murmansk after an encounter with a British submarine.

The extent of damage to the Admiral Graf Spee remained undisclosed. The high command in a communique said merely that she had received "some hits" after severely damaging her three antagonists. Before the battle, the communique said, the warship sank the British merchantman Tairoa, 7,983 tons, and the Streonshalh, 3,895 tons.

New German Naval Activity.

Military sources described the battle as part of the German naval activity begun two weeks ago. Since then, these sources said, heavy units have ventured far into the Atlantic and into the northern part of the North Sea.

In another announcement the high command said an unidentified German light cruiser had been damaged slightly by an underwater explosion, but had reached a home port safely.

[The British admiralty earlier had announced the torpedoing of a German cruiser and the sinking of a U-boat by the same submarine which failed to catch the Bremen.]

2 CLOCK THIEFS SENTENCED.

Thomas Carroll, 3331 Wallace street, was sentenced to 90 days; and John O'Brien, 4333 South Halsted street, to 30 days in the Bridewell by Judge Joseph J. Drucker in felony court yesterday for trying to steal clocks from the Graham elementary school, 4436 South Union avenue.

Red Envoy at Roosevelt Reception

Top hatted Ambassador Constantine Oumansky of soviet Russia and his wife leaving their embassy for White House reception for foreign diplomats last night. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Smallest Crowd

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—The smallest and most tension-shot diplomatic reception in many years opened the winter social season at the White House tonight. The affair was as brilliant as usual, but the gold braid of diplomats' resplendent uniforms covered, in some cases, heavy hearts and uncertain feelings born of hostilities in Europe and the orient.

Instead of the usual 1,200 to 1,800 guests, officials said those in attendance were limited to about 700 and included only high government officials and a limited number of state department executives with their wives.

Again, the war abroad was responsible. Mrs. Roosevelt had announced earlier that Washington residential society would not be invited to any receptions this year. She indicated the purpose was to reduce the President's social duties—and keep the line of those he must receive as short as possible.

Passengers Fill Last U.S. Ship to Leave Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 14 (AP).—The 5,152 ton steamer Scanmail, last American ship scheduled to leave Denmark for the duration of the war, departed for America tonight with a capacity passenger list. Among the passengers were several persons from the American embassy in Berlin.

Franco Commutes Death Sentences of Two Priests

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 14.—Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain has commuted the death sentence on two Basque priests to 30 years' imprisonment, it was learned here today. It was also learned that 50 Basque priests are being kept prisoner in Carmona prison in Andalusia.

Report Germans Attacked, but Missed Belgian Steamer

OSTEND, Belgium, Dec. 14 (AP).—The 731-ton Belgian steamer Yvonne tonight was reported to have been attacked near England Dec. 5 by a German plane which dropped bombs but failed to hit the little ship. There was no damage.

French Deputies Approve First Civil Budget of War

PARIS, Dec. 14 (AP).—The chamber of deputies today gave unanimous approval to the first wartime civil budget which estimated receipts at $1,746,068,018 and expenditures at $1,743,709,008. The civil budget is part of the ordinary budget which Finance Minister Paul Reynaud has drawn up calling for expenditure of $7,678,000,000, mostly for war expenditures. In addition there is to be an extraordinary budget for supplementary items. In 1939 this was $594,000,000.

information as to British casualties in the battle.

The prime minister listed total British casualties for the first three months of war as 2,100 as compared with 12,500 for the first two months of the world war. Unofficially, British naval casualties in this war were placed at 1,994 and air force, 427. There has been no separate listing of land dead.

Chamberlain explained the sinking of the Duchess as "an accident which one must expect as almost inevitable under conditions of darkness" prevailvailing on blacked out sea lanes.

Finns Called Best Fighters.

Turning to another war front, Chamberlain declared "the Finnish army has proved itself by far the better fighting force in anything but numbers" in his final war statement before parliament's Christmas recess. He added:

"It is too soon to attempt any forecast of the outcome of this unequal struggle but its political consequences already have been far reaching."

Cheer Plan to Aid Finns.

The house cheered his statement that "in addition to air supplies to Finland the government intend similarly to release other materials that will be of assistance to the Finnish government." He added generous help had been forthcoming from other countries, including the United States.

Lauding the league of nations' action in condemning Russia for the invasion of Finland, Chamberlain told the house of commons that "Germany alone among the nations even now is abetting by word and deed the Russian aggression."

BELGRADE REDS STONE POLICE; MANY INJURED IN CLASH; 60 JAILED

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Dec. 14.—Police were stoned by communist demonstrators this evening. Many demonstrators were injured in the ensuing mêlée, and 60 were arrested and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Students and workers hoisted banners in various parts of the city protesting against the "capitalist" and "imperialist" war. When dispersed by police they fired at shop windows and assaulted the police with rocks.

Student meetings have been forbidden until the end of the year. Meanwhile, the main faction of the Democratic Students' association has completed a purge of communists, and plans to counter the persistent propaganda of the communists, who are suspected of receiving German subsidies.

JAPANESE TRIAL OF AN AMERICAN CLERIC IS OPENED

TOKIO, Dec. 14 (AP).—Domei, Japanese news agency, reported the trial of the Rev. Luther Tucker, Episcopal missionary from Mount Kisco, N. Y., on charges of violating regulations prohibiting seditious literature and the circulation of false reports, began today in Kyoto District court.

The Rev. Luther Tucker.

The nonjury trial was closed to the public, but it was learned authoritatively that the American embassy had an observer in Kyoto. The clergyman was arrested Oct. 12 aboard a ship at Kobe. Details of the charges against him have not been disclosed.

URUGUAY GIVES GERMANS TIME TO REPAIR SHIP

British Strengthen Watch Over Raider.

The other four vessels which fell victim to the raider were the Clement, sunk off Brazil Sept. 30; the Newton Beach, attacked off South Africa Oct. 5; the Pairo, which went down on Dec. 4, the same day as the Doric Star, and the Streonshalh, sunk off the Platte river about a week ago.

A close inspection today of the crippled warship revealed graphically the effectiveness of the British guns. Three holes, apparently made by 6 inch shells, gaped on the starboard waterline, forward. A huge hole, a yard and a half in diameter, was blasted thru the hull into the ship's sleeping quarters on the port side forward.

Plates Bent Outward.

Plates bent outward indicated the effect of what must have been a severe explosion within the ship. Another gap, large enough for several men to enter together, could be seen in the fighting tower. The heavy shell apparently came over the stern during the chase. The 6 inch portside gun tower was overturned.

The Admiral Graf Spee lay high out of the water, possibly confirming the contention of some Germans that she was forced to run for shelter because her fuel was giving out. Docks and portside streets were crowded all day with great crowds, gazing at the pocket battleship swinging at its distant anchorage. Plain pine coffins were heaped in a grim pile on the dock, preparatory to be taken aboard the Admiral Graf Spee for her dead.

The victims will be buried tomorrow in North cemetery which lies on the edge of Montevideo. The coffins will be borne to the cemetery in seven covered vans, followed by the ship's band and 100 seamen from the crippled German raider.

Charges Gas Shells Used.

Otto Langman, German minister to Uruguay, visited the Admiral Graf Spee and upon his return to shore charged the crewmen were suffering from lung and eye injuries caused by gas shells fired by the British. One of two seriously injured German crewmen removed from the ship appeared to have lost his sight from his wounds.

Ringside spectators of the war's first real sea battle meanwhile reached the safety of Montevideo aboard the 9,975 ton French merchant ship Formose. They told graphic accounts of the spectacular sea fight deep in the American neutrality zone.

The passengers spent all yesterday wearing lifebelts and watching the encounter from the decks of the Formose, intended prey of the Admiral Graf Spee.

Safety in Smokescreen.

Many of them were incoherent as they tried to piece together the tense moments they spent while their skipper, Capt. Jacques Buron, maneuvered his vessel behind a heavy smokescreen laid down by the Ajax.

The Formose was proceeding along the Brazilian coast of Rio Grande do Sul yesterday, they related, when they sighted the fleet German raider.

"The Formose headed full speed for Uruguayan territorial waters. The merchantman wallowed along at her top speed of 12 knots while the German warship quickly closed in," said one passenger.

"It was a race against time for British cruisers were known to be nearby.

"Then the Ajax, first of the British cruisers to join the battle, came into sight and began chasing the Admiral Graf Spee. The Ajax sent out a call to the Achilles and the Exeter.

"The Achilles raced to the scene, speeding past the Ajax and opening fire. Next came the Exeter, which got the worst of the German vessel's fight against the three British ships. The Admiral Graf Spee took to her heels and we lost sight of the battle."

But as dusk fell over the South Atlantic those aboard the Formose again became eye witnesses to the conflict as their ship neared the Uruguayan coast.

The German vessel was sighted about 8 p. m., running away, with the cruisers Ajax and Achilles in pursuit, the Exeter having been forced to drop out. The Formose's passengers said the firing continued for about an hour, then subsided, only to be renewed for another hour. The thunder of battle halted abruptly when the warships found themselves well within Uruguayan waters.

Tide of Battle

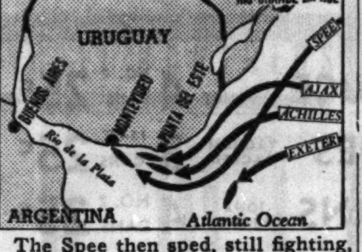
The French merchant ship Formose first sighted the German Graf Spee and began race for Uruguayan waters. The British cruiser Ajax sped between the Formose and the Spee and laid a smoke screen in which the Formose escaped.

The British cruisers Achilles and Exeter then joined the Ajax in battle against the Spee, the Exeter bearing the brunt of the fighting.



The Spee then sped, still fighting, for Montevideo, pursued by the Achilles and the Ajax, the Exeter limping off because of damages. The Spee reached Montevideo and the Achilles and Ajax took up a watch near by.

SWEDEN ASSAILED IN BROADCAST BY MOSCOW'S RADIO

MOSCOW, Dec. 14 (AP).—The Moscow radio launched a sharp attack tonight against members of the Swedish Social Democratic party and their organ, Social Democrat.

"Slaves and hirelings of capitalists and imperialistic interests have dared to abuse the glorious Red army, which with such unselfishness has lent its help to the democratic Finnish republic," said the broadcast.

"These so-called Socialists have sunk so deep that their newspaper has reached the level of the worst Paris boulevard papers. But the whole world and even the Swedish people will realize the unselfish work of the soviet union and her army."

LINKS WITH THE PAST

By CALEB

SEDATELY awaiting the visitor to our ninth-floor Galleries, stands a veteran Hepplewhite breakfront secretary and bookcase (circa 1780), whose century and a half of service in some stately old English home have not diminished, but merely mellowed and enhanced, the inherent dignity of its presence.

Behind its ample lower doors, rare cabinetry has concealed an array of three capacious drawers for linens, at either side; while the central section folds down to disclose a secretary whose six inner compartments and octet of open pigeonholes provided the butler with ample accommodations, and the mistress a strategic rendezvous with her correspondence. Wide latticed doors enclosing the upper, or bookcase, section are glazed with individual panes of 18th-century glass, from whose surfaces the slight variations of moulding shed a ripply play of light and shadow.

Instinctively, the lover of fine woods caresses the time-burnished patina imparted to this sturdy cabinet's dark mahogany by long decades of service; a patina that throws over the modernity of Now the shining spell of old times, old manners, and old customs.

Nearby, still another link with the past is the statuesque Queen Anne grandfather's clock gravely regarding us. Eight feet in height, this ancient timepiece dates from 1730, and is richly wrought in Chinese lacquer relief of dull black, bronze and red. On its rotund steel and figured-brass face is a minute-hand dial, and past a square orifice at the bottom rotates the day of the month.

Graven on a convex steel boss above the dial, one reads in flowing script the name of the maker: Sam Weston, Stratford — a renowned name among old English clock-builders—and with a start we realize that his shop stood in Shakespeare's own town! . . . This stalwart masterpiece of his, in fact, formerly served in the home of Lady Burton, and in an imaginative moment our ears almost hear its clangorous summons echoing through her one-time sumptuous chambers and halls.

Enriched by such fine artistry of bygone times and craftsmen are countless items of Field merchandise such as these—and somehow their gracious values, quietly awaiting the right owner, dominate our more modern wares with an atmosphere of largeness and authority all their own. Linking the past with the present, they remind us that the one forever contributes much without which the other could not exist.

EXPECT PROTEST ON NAVAL BATTLE IN SAFETY ZONE

Hull Indicates American Nations Will Confer.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—Concerned because the greatest sea battle of the European war, the engagement off the coasts of Argentina and Uruguay, was staged by Britain and Germany inside the western hemisphere safety zone, Secretary of State Cordell Hull today indicated the 21 American republics will consult and probably will present formal protests to the combatants.

As the state department worried over the complexities of the international situation, the navy department made no effort to hide sighs of relief. The bottling up of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee in Montevideo by three British cruisers was accepted as vindication of the decision against building vessels of the raider type.

Full Report Awaited.

Secretary Hull said that no official action could be expected until after a full report has been received on the engagement between the warships.

The consultation will center upon the apparent violation of the western hemisphere safety zone, which fixes a neutrality belt averaging 300 miles off the continental coasts, decreed at the conference of American republics at Panama on the outbreak of the war between Germany and Britain and France.

Under the declaration of Panama a consultation on the matter may be called by any of the signatory American republics. No course of action for disregard of the safety zone was fixed at the conference in the hope that belligerents would be warned off and the American republics would not have to face a breach of the pact.

Matter of Joint Interest.

Hull noted that American republics operate on a basis of complete equality in matters of joint interest and that consultation might be effected thru routine diplomatic channels or possibly thru a special conference of all nations.

Hull reported he had been authoritatively informed from Montevideo that the German vessel had been granted permission to stay in the South American harbor for 48 hours and that permission to tarry might be extended for the purpose of effecting repairs on proper application to Uruguayan authorities.

He made no note of the fact that the British cruisers were lying off the harbor to block an escape attempt and had been joined by the heavy cruiser Cumberland armed with eight inch guns. The cruisers which engaged the pocket battleship with its 11 inch guns were light cruisers, carrying six inch guns.

Force Not Considered.

The secretary said that the western nations had not contemplated the use of force in preserving the sanctity of the safety zone. This may be a matter for discussion if a conference is called to consider what steps can be taken by the republics to maintain the Panama declaration.

Hull said that the American nations have every right to expect that no belligerent acts will be committed within purely American waters, thousands of miles from the scene of the European war.

The White House was silent on the naval battle. However, the President conferred with Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles, specialist on Latin-American affairs, after the latter had discussed the battle with Felipe Espil, Argentine ambassador to the United States.

Predict Joint Protest.

Latin-American diplomats, reached privately, agreed that a joint protest probably will be decided upon by the American nations after consultation. In other diplomatic circles it was said that the British and Germans can plead the doctrine of pursuit in international law under which a pursuer is entitled to follow his prey into neutral water and the pursued can flee to the protection of a neutral.

At the navy department ranking officers said that the victory of the three cruisers over the Admiral Graf Spee clearly demonstrated the wisdom of the navy's decision of three weeks ago to bar pocket battleships from the American fleet.

On Nov. 15 Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison halted plans for construction of two new 8,000 ton cruisers, the Cleveland and the Columbia, in order to permit a review of European naval developments, particularly the pocket battleships with which Germany was raiding the seas.

Altho he said he did not think the three German pocket battleships had shown much in two and a half months of raiding, he considered it advisable that the navy ponder the value of 10,000 ton vessels, armed with 11 inch guns and capable of a speed of 26 knots.

Several days later he announced that it had been decided to continue with the original plans, thus informing the nation that vessels of the German type had been voted down.

The decision was made, it was learned today, because American naval officers agreed that the German vessels were freak vessels, built only because the Versailles treaty held construction to a 10,000 ton limit.

The officers also agreed that the American heavy cruisers would be a match for pocket battleships at any time. The American heavy cruisers have a speed of 32 knots, which would enable them to run rings around the raiders, and carry nine 8 inch guns. These would be as effective as the heavier 11 inch guns of the pocket battleships.

HOOVER DENIES OFFER AS HEAD OF WAR RELIEF

Issues Statement in Reply to White House.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—Reports of tension between Herbert Hoover's relief organization for Finland and the Red Cross, which is headed by President Roosevelt, led to the following barrage of pronouncements today [in chronological order]:

Herbert Hoover. [Assoc. Press Wirephoto.]

1. Hoover denied at New York that there was any fritction between his campaign for Finnish relief funds and any other group. He said it "is a great pity that people will start out to poison the wells of human charity." A newspaper article had said there was friction.

2. Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, said that about the time Germany was moving into Poland Mr. Roosevelt, thru Chairman Norman Davis of the Red Cross, sought to have Mr. Hoover become a "sort of general manager of relief" for European war sufferers. Early added that "apparently Mr. Hoover did not see fit to accept the offer."

Richey Replies to Early.

3. Lawrence Richey, Hoover's secretary, said in reply to Early that there was some confusion; that "there was no discussion of Red Cross organization before the war, as he implies." Hoover added that since the war, he had continuously supported Davis and the Red Cross activities. He said that he recommended "strongly that the Red Cross expand to take over every kind of relief, and offered his counsel and advice," but the Red Cross "did not feel that they could assume such large responsibilities outside their normal field."

4. Chairman Davis of the Red Cross said that Hoover, some time ago, had declined to consider heading a proposed Red Cross committee on European war relief. Davis said Hoover told him that "while he was ready to coöperate and assist the Red Cross, he did not feel justified in heading a committee."

Hoover Denies Report.

Hoover, during his interview in New York, had said there was "not a word of truth" in a published report that he declined a Roosevelt invitation to take charge of all public relief activities in the United States because he wished to participate in the 1940 presidential campaign and did not desire to become identified with the New Deal.

Both relief organizations said they had agreed to consult and coöperate with each other.

TAVERN SERVICE ON CURB ILLEGAL, COUNCIL IS TOLD

If a thirsty motorist honks his horn in front of a tavern and the bartender hurries out with a stein of beer, the law is broken. This opinion was presented to the city council yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel Martin Foss.

Attorney General John E. Cassidy recently held that curb service is legal. It isn't in Chicago, Foss said, for two reasons. One is that tavern licenses authorize sales only on the premises and the curb is not a premise. The second is that there's a state law prohibiting intoxicants in automobiles unless they're in bottles with the seals unbroken.

Ald. John Duffy [19th] had asked the corporation counsel whether it was advisable to amend the license ordinance to prevent curb service.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

GOVERNORS TAKE OVER RULE IN 7 INDIA PROVINCES

Zetland Says Clock Is Set Back 30 Years.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Marquess of Zetland, secretary of state for India and Burma, announced in the house of lords today that the administration of the seven India provinces in which the congress ministries recently resigned have been taken over by governors.

"The result is that entirely contrary to our desires the hands of the clock have been set back more than thirty years," he asserted.

At the same time he charged that German propaganda has attempted to spread the idea in India that natives "should look to Nazi Germany for their freedom."

Despite the propaganda, he said, the Indian princes and people "continue to express their detestation of the crimes of Nazi Germany."

Tells of Political Troubles.

Regarding political troubles in India, Zetland said the popular governments are functioning normally and successfully in Punjab, Bengal, and Sind. In Assam, where the congress prime minister resigned, an alternative government has been formed under the leadership of Sir Syed Muhammad Saadulla, former prime minister of that province. It is in the remaining seven provinces that the administration has been taken over by governors.

It was recalled that the Marquess of Lithlingow, viceroy of India, in a radio speech Nov. 5 announced that as a result of differences between the All India congress and the Moslem league over the country's future he had no choice but to invoke emergency powers. Such powers vest authority in provincial governors when the constitutional machnery breaks down.

Welcomes One Sentence.

Zetland said the working committee of the Congress party had made a further statement on its position in which was one sentence he warmly welcomed. This sentence was: "It is inherent in every form of passive resistance—as exemplified by the calling out of the ministries—that no effort is spared to achieve an honorable settlement with an opponent."

Zetland added, "That is what we ourselves most earnestly desire."

Declaring that no constitution could function successfully that did not meet with the general assent of minorities, Zetland said that altho Moslems were spoken of as the minority they number from 80,000,000 to 90,000,000.

Rivals to Meet Again.

"I believe some little encouragement from reports which have reached me that Pandit Nehru of the All India congress and Minister Jinnah, president of the All India Moslem league, have arranged to meet one another for further discussion," Zetland continued.

"I am convinced that as long as the legislatures are divided on communal instead of upon political lines, so long will serious difficulty be experienced in working democratic institutions with success.

"What we have to aim at is that a legislator will think of himself as an Indian first and only as a Hindu or Moslem, or a member of other communities, afterward."

Dixie Limited Is Derailed; Passengers Get a Shaking

Cartersville, Ga., Dec. 14 (AP).—Passengers on the southbound Dixie Limited, including Laura Hope Crews of the films, were shaken up today by derailment of three cars at Hall's Station, Ga. There were no injuries. Officials of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway company said a broken rail caused the accident, rolling a Pullman, the dining, and observation cars into a ditch. The remainder of the train, en route from Chicago, continued on to Atlanta.

With the Grenadiers of Morgan Park Military academy conducting the ceremony, Miss Madeleine Shannon was crowned Christmas queen yesterday at the Chicago Federated Advertising club's annual yule party, held in the Grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman.

PRACTICAL JOKER FINDS JUDGE HAS PRACTICAL MIND

A practical joker found no sympathy yesterday in Stockyards court, where Judge Matthew D. Hartigan was presiding. The defendant was James Di Biase, 4410 South Troy street, a janitor at Chicago airport. He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon by John Ruby, 6118 South Kolmar avenue, clerk in the airport radio control tower.

Ruby testified Di Biase stabbed and slightly wounded him with a small pocketknife on Nov. 1. But, said Di Biase, Ruby had been pestering him all day long, exploding firecrackers behind him wherever he was working.

"You're nothing but a practical joker and you've been punished accordingly," Judge Hartigan told Ruby. The judge freed Di Biase.

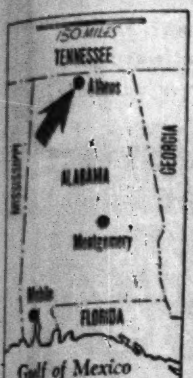
COLLEGE BUILDS HOSIERY MILL TO GIVE CO-EDS JOBS

Provides a Plan to Earn Way Thru School.

Athens, Ala., Dec. 14 (AP).—Historic Athens college, where many a plantation belle learned the social graces before the civil war, launched a new experiment in student aid today when ground was broken for the first unit of a silk hosiery mill to be operated by college girls.



Map shows location of Athens college.

This unit, to cost approximately $50,000 and scheduled for completion next spring, will provide jobs for 100 students, working four hour shifts. Three additional units are planned in 1943, each to add 100 jobs.

Hopes to Help Hundreds.

Dr. E. R. Naylor, college president and father of the hosiery mill plan, said the school hopes the mill will enable hundreds of girls to realize ambitions of a college education.

Students will be paid 25 cents an hour for the first 480 hours and 30 cents for the next 480, with both training periods to be completed the first school year. The wage for the second, third, and fourth years will be 40 cents an hour.

Bonuses of 5 cents an hour will be given for efficient work the first three years. A bonus of 10 cents is possible the fourth year.

Plan Nonprofit Operation.

The product of the mill will be sold on a contract basis. The college does not expect to make a profit from the mill operation, but looks for no deficit. Money for the four units will come largely from an unnamed philanthropist.

Dr. Naylor makes it plain the step is not one directed toward making Athens college a vocational school.

"It is a liberal arts college, steeped in the traditions of the old south," he said, "and the main purpose of this experiment is to give the students means to obtain a liberal arts education."

Kansas City Cleanup Head Is Appointed as Judge

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 14 (AP).—Sam C. Blair, who had a double role in the fight against Boss Tom Pendergast's Democratic political machine, accepted appointment today to the Circuit bench. He resigned his $8,000 a year city counselorship to take the $6,000 a year judgeship of the 14th district, succeeding the late Nike G. Sevier, who died Dec. 1. A year of the term remains. The appointment was made by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, at whose urging Blair last summer resigned from the staff of Maurice M. Milligan, United States district attorney, to continue the Kansas City cleanup drive.

REP. BOLLES ASSAILS TRADE TREATIES AS ENEMY OF DAIRYING

Monroe, Wis., Dec. 14 [Special].—Assailing the New Deal reciprocal trade treaties as a damper on Wisconsin dairy industry, Representative Stephen Bolles [R., Janesville], representing the 1st congressional district, in a speech here today pledged his efforts to fight these treaties until they are off the books. He spoke before the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Swiss and Limburger Cheese Producers' association.

Bolles declared that southern congressmen and senators, representing powerful cotton blocs, had prevented thoro consideration of Wisconsin dairy farmer problems. The cotton representatives, he said, formed the biggest opposition to dairy representatives.

Bolles asked the several hundred farmers present to rise if they were opposed to the reciprocal trade treaties. Practically all arose.

The state dairy industry has suffered under the reciprocal trade pacts, said Bolles, because of the increased importation of cheese and other dairy products.

MILK DRIVERS NOMINATE; CUT PAY OF OFFICERS

Prepare for Union's First Election in 18 Years.

Members of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, at a session last night marked by long and loud wrangling, nominated slates of candidates for the union's first election of officers in 18 years. Among the long time officers who will face opposition are Robert G. Fitchie, veteran president, and Steve Sumner, 90 year old secretary-treasurer.

More than 1,500 of the union's 4,700 members crowded into a hall at Van Buren street and Ashland avenue for last night's session. They not only decided on the election, to be held Dec. 28, but voted that henceforth an election will be held every three years, and sliced the salaries of all officers drastically.

A full set of candidates was nominated to oppose the officers, who have held their positions since 1921 because the membership was content with its high wages and the union's freedom from racketeering. In the last two years a growing faction has demanded a showdown on the permanent offices issue.

Parent Body Orders Vote.

The result of this demand was that the union was ordered by its parent body, the International Brotherhood of Chauffeurs, Teamsters, Stablemen, and Helpers, to hold an election.

Fitchie will be opposed by Henry Weber, one of the leaders of the rival faction. Three other candidates for president also popped up. They are Walter Thompson, A. M. Grant, and Harry Van Afkind. James G. Kennedy, vice president, will have Peter Didier as an opponent.

Sumner will seek to hold his position against the scattering attack of four aspirants, Thomas Haggerty, George Bender, A. Kratz, and William Dellesander.

Ray Bryant withdrew as a nominee for recording secretary to run for business agent with Al Richards on the Fitchie ticket. Fred Dahms is the candidate for recording secretary, opposing Peter Hoban of the Weber slate.

Everybody Wants to Be Trustee.

After Joseph Patterson was renominated for trustee 21 names were put up immediately to oppose him.

Union members argued heatedly over the officers' salary cuts.

A measure, first passed, then rescinded, provided for a cut of more than 50 per cent in the pay of several officers, including the president, who now gets $13,000 a year. One of the drivers leaped to his feet and roared:

"I always said you were a cheap outfit. This action proves you are a bunch of cheapskates. How can our officers work for our best interests if you don't pay 'em good salaries? Why, you guys are the kind who go into restaurants and don't tip the waitresses!"

President's Pay Cut $3,000.

A modified list of salary cuts then was approved. The officers to be elected Dec. 28 will be paid as follows: President, $10,000 instead of $13,000; vice president, $9,000 instead of $10,200; secretary-treasurer, $10,000 instead of $13,000; recording secretary, $7,500 instead of $9,000; business agents, $7,500 instead of $9,000, and trustee, $5,000 instead of $7,200.

The union voted without debate to pay the legal expenses of Fitchie and other officers who are among defendants indicted in the Chicago milk case alleging conspiracy and restraint of trade. There was a move, however, to defer the election until after the trial. This was voted down.

JURY CUTS COST CITY MUST PAY FOR AIRPORT LAND

Value of $42,190 Put on Herman Parcel.

A jury yesterday affirmed the city's contention that 40 cents a square foot is too much for a narrow strip of land vital to the expansion of the Chicago airport.

The jury awarded the owner 25 cents a square foot in condemnation proceedings before Judge Denis J. Normoyle. This was $42,190 for a tract half a mile long and 66 feet wide owned by the Weaver Realty company.

The owner's demands, once branded outrageous by Mayor Kelly, have been a stumbling block in the path of the expansion plan for two years.

Tax Value Far Lower.

The tract is known as the Herman property because negotiations over the sale have been conducted by Raymond E. Herman, real estate dealer at 10 South La Salle street. Stock of the Weaver company is held in his wife's name, according to the corporation counsel's office.

When the city first attempted to buy the property city officials said that Herman was asking three times what they offered. They said he valued the land at $17,000 an acre to them, altho he valued it for tax purposes at $1,000 an acre.

Herman finally agreed to abide by an appraisal by the Chicago Real Estate board. A $65,000 appraisal was issued in the name of Arthur Kruggel, president of the board. Kruggel promptly repudiated it as that of a committee of which he had no knowledge. He then made a personal appraisal of 20 cents a square foot.

City Files Suit.

Negotiations were broken off and the city brought condemnation suits thru Joseph T. Grossman, first assistant corporation counsel, and Harry R. Posner, assistant corporation counsel.

The company demanded $68,784, or 40 cents a square foot. The city offered 10 cents, or $17,196.

Three trials have brought condemnation of 56 of the 78 parcels required for the expansion. Amounts awarded total $111,378. The city requires the land for a new right of way for the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad, tracks of which now bisect the airport property.

STATE BANS TRIAL OF DRUNK DRIVERS BY MAGISTRATES

Police magistrates and justices of the peace have no authority to try motorists on state charges of drunken driving, according to an opinion given yesterday in Springfield by John E. Cassidy, attorney general. He issued the opinion in response to a query from John H. Hollenbeck, state's attorney of Clark county.

A survey of the Chicago district disclosed that the magistrates and justices are trying drunken driving cases. But they are trying them under local ordinances instead of the state law. The ordinances do not empower the courts to impose jail sentences, according to Joseph H. Braun, general counsel of the Chicago Motor club.

The Chicago and Evanston municipal courts try defendants under the state law, which provides prison sentences.

Assistants in the attorney general's office said that in case motorists have been convicted of drunken driving by justices of the peace or police magistrates the convictions would be void.

CITY PROBES O. K. STICKER GIVEN TO $15 DEATH JALOPY

Follow Trail of Car That Killed Boy, 11.

Edward Gorman, deputy motor vehicle commissioner, yesterday followed the trail of a $15 flivver from the time it started riding the streets with an O. K. safety sticker until it struck and killed a boy 11 years old.

The safety sticker was affixed to the car's windshield, which was so cloudy and blurred with age that only a third of the glass was clearly transparent. Gorman is investigating in an attempt to determine how and why the machine was passed thru the safety lane. The sticker was issued June 27 at a lane at 3638 Harrison street. Gorman was told none of the nine man crew then on duty is at present employed inspecting autos for the city.

Bought Because of Sticker.

Chester Syslo, 22 years old, 1452 North Keating avenue, said he bought the nine year old car when he was shown the O. K. sticker as a guarantee of its roadworthy condition. On Nov. 24 he struck Guido Ghilarducci, 2850 North Menard avenue, in front of 5811 Diversey avenue. The boy died.

Syslo, a punch press operator, was booked on a charge of manslaughter when police noticed the condition of the windshield. He was freed, however, in Felony court, where the windshield was not mentioned.

The man from whom Syslo bought the car was Frank Ude, 1842 West 23d street. He was interviewed by Policeman Leroy Carlson, an investigator for Gorman. Ude said he had taken the machine to a garage in 21st street between Rockwell street and Washtenaw avenue to get the front wheels and headlamps adjusted and that the garage man obtained the safety sticker for him.

The only garage in that vicinity is Joseph Kayla's at 2637 West 21st street. Kayla said he did not recall the service job. Policeman Carlson plans to take Ude to the garage today.

Attorney Howard P. Rowe, representing the Ghilarducci boy's parents, yesterday considered filing a civil suit against the city of Chicago, charging negligent or fraudulent issuance of a safety sticker on a dangerously defective automobile.

"I think it can be established in court that the city was definitely responsible for that car being on the streets," he said. Rowe said also he will file a $10,000 damage suit against Syslo.

Autoist Refuses to Stop for Children; Gets 10 Days

Matthew Posluszny, 3746 South Wood street, was sentenced to ten days in the county jail by Judge Frank Donoghue in Safety court yesterday for reckless driving. His driver's license was impounded for one year. Posluszny was arrested Wednesday when he ignored a policeman's order to stop for school children crossing the street in the 4400 block in Augusta boulevard.

LICENSE TRACED; ACCUSED HIT-RUN DRIVER GIVES UP

Thomas J. Jarrett, colored, of 4853 Evans avenue, surrendered yesterday to the Fillmore police. He was held as the driver of an automobile which struck and injured Robert Weber, 54 years old, 2543 South Homan avenue, at Arthington avenue and Pulaski road Wednesday night. The driver fled, and the police traced the license number to Jarrett. Weber is in a critical condition in the Garfield Park hospital.

Thor Thorson, 71 years old, 4330 North Paulina street, a retired street car conductor, died in Ravenswood hospital of injuries suffered Wednesday when he was struck by an automobile at Paulina street and Lawrence avenue. The driver was Helgar Norden, 18, of 4304 North Lawndale avenue.

William H. Weter, 79 years old, a farmer, was killed when he was struck by a truck in highway 173 near Harvard in McHenry county.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 854 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 657 were killed in Chicago, where 21,364 were injured in the same period.

PREPARE SKETCH OF NEW HOME FOR INCORRIGIBLES

State Architect C. Herrick Hammond said yesterday his department is preparing sketches of the new security home for incorrigibles, who are now sent to St. Charles School for Boys. The new home will be located on the Fox river near Sheridan in La Salle county.

After the sketches have been approved by the state commission authorized to build the institution, Hammond said, working plans will be drafted and bids for construction sought. Actual construction is not expected to start until spring.

The architect's office and the department of public welfare are considering bids received for building a fence around the present St. Charles school.

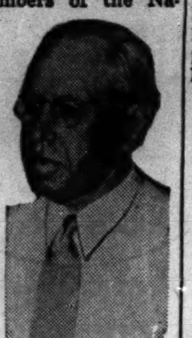
UNION CHIEFTAIN BRANDS NLRB AS LABOR'S ENEMY

Charges Board with Bias and Incompetence.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—A majority of the members of the National Labor Relations board and the great majority of its 900 employés are wholly incompetent and utterly unqualified to administer the Wagner labor act, an American Federation of Labor leader told a congressional committee today.



John P. Frey.

John P. Frey, head of the metal trades division of the A. F. of L. denounced the board as having done more harm to the cause of labor than any antiunion agency ever organized.

The members of the board had pre-conceived ideas in favor of the industrial union campaign sponsored by John L. Lewis, Frey testified, and have worked with a "fierce zeal" to further the cause of the C. I. O. in the United States.

Calls Situation Unfortunate.

"My conviction is that a majority of the board and the great majority of its personnel are wholly unqualified by experience or practical knowledge to occupy the positions they do," Frey declared. "It is a great misfortune that a worthy law should be administered by incompetent and prejudiced officials."

"As an expert on labor relations, do you believe the labor board has endeavored to influence the form of trade unionism in the United States?" asked Committee Counsel Edmund Toland.

"I am convinced that the board, by its decisions, has shown a very definite tendency to set up a governmental form of organized labor rather than a voluntary form," Frey replied.

The witness referred to the announced intention of C. I. O. Leader Lewis to collect a $800,000 fund from his unions for use in the 1940 campaign as a development dangerous both to labor and to a democratic form of government.

Cites Earlier Consequences.

"Nothing could be more destructive to labor and to a democratic form of government than to allow an organization to collect moneys to be used for partisan political purposes," Frey told the committee.

"The unfortunate consequence of Lewis' contribution of $600,000 to the Democratic party in the last campaign will be recalled. A year later Lewis publicly reproached the chief executive of the nation for not fulfilling the obligation implied by the contribution. Now Lewis has widely advertised the fact that $800,000 is to be collected next spring and to be used for political purposes next year. Legislation should be passed to make such contributions illegal."

The decisions of the labor board, Frey continued, have violated the rights of workers to join the form of organization which they might choose. The A. F. of L., he added, is compiling a long list of cases to prove this point. This evidence will be submitted later to the committee," he

More Memoranda Read.

Memoranda from the confidential files of the labor board continued to enliven the hearing and to illustrate the attitude of board employés. One such note from Mary Moore, a regional correspondent for the board, written to a Miss Hanson, another board employé, was dated May 25, 1938. It read:

"The Morgan decision had us disturbed greatly for a few days, but the courts have on their 'red' robes again and we are on top of the world."

In the Morgan case the United States Supreme court condemned the arbitrary procedure of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace in fixing rates charged by Kansas City stockyards commission men. The court held Wallace had denied the defendants a full and fair hearing. The ruling caused consternation in other New Deal agencies, especially the labor board, which immediately ran for cover by withdrawing cases in which it had not conformed to the full and fair hearing formula.

Boycott Aid Indicated.

The committee was told that correspondence found in the files of Board Member Edwin S. Smith indicated he aided a union in boycotting a plant at Reading, Pa., where a strike was in progress.

Roger A. Robb, associate counsel for the committee, testified concerning a strike in 1936 at the Berkshire Knitting Mills plant at Reading which was called by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, a C. I. O. affiliate.

At the time of the strike, Robb testified, no charges or complaints against the company had been lodged with the board. He said he found a letter from one of the union officials in Smith's files telling the board member that the union was planning on boycotting the firm. He said he also found a letter from Smith to Louis Kirstein of Filene's department store in Boston, transmitting to Kirstein the information Smith had received from the union officials.

Robb identified "informal reports" sent to the board from its Philadelphia office at the request of Smith, telling of the strike's progress. There was also correspondence showing that Smith conferred with union leaders relative to charges subsequently filed with the board.

Urges Changes in Law.

Joe Ozanic, president of the Progressive Mine Workers of America, concluded his testimony before the committee by recommending several changes in the law to cancel the bias and prejudice in favor of the C. I. O.

"The 80,000 miners in our union are purposefully being deprived by a partial board of the fundamental rights to which they are entitled under the law," he declared. "Our exhibits prove beyond question that the board has taken unfair advantage of the broad discretionary powers vested in it.

"The mine workers thruout the country are being made the unwilling victims of an unscrupulous group of self-styled leaders representing the C. I. O. with the approval of the board. The Wagner act has been made a farce by the board. The administration of it is nothing more than a sham.

"Amendments are necessary at the earliest possible moment to curtail the broad powers of the board and making it mandatory to conduct an investigation and certify the bargaining representative entitled thereto at the request of a labor organization and also making it obligatory upon the board to act on petitions for representation within a specified period of time."

G. O. P. CHAIRMEN WILL CONFER ON THEIR 1940 SLATE

But They Vote Not to Force Selves to Do So.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 14.—Republican county chairmen of Illinois were invited today to meet here on next Jan. 25 to discuss the 1940 campaign, and decide whether they should indorse a 1940 primary slate.

This was agreed upon by the executive committee of the county chairmen's association. Thumbs were turned down on a resolution which would have required the January meeting either to indorse a primary slate or call for an expression from the chairmen on the "prospects and availability" of the various state candidates.

Loses by 9 to 5 Vote.

This resolution, which was presented by Chairman Noble Johnson of Ford county, was defeated 9 to 5, with Edward F. Moore, Cook county chairman and head of the executive committee, casting the ninth vote.

As finally approved, the resolution calling the big meeting provides that the chairmen discuss:

1. "Ways and means of promoting the progress of the Republican party in Illinois," and

2. "All other matters that any chairman desires to bring before the association."

Thus the question of slate making was not precluded from business, but it is not obligatory upon the association to pick a list of candidates.

The Opposing Sides.

Johnson directed the fight for slate making and was opposed by the forces led by Moore and Charles A. O'Connor, Kane county chairman and president of the association.

Altho Moore and O'Connor were instrumental in the selection of the 1939 state slate headed by Richard J. Lyons for senator, they feel that in 1940 the fight should be open, with the two or more slates now being formed free to campaign without indorsements from the county chairmen's association. It is believed that they will persist in this stand at the January meeting.

Despite the neutral action taken by the executive committee today, there was plenty of political talk in the hotel corridors outside the meeting room door, and elsewhere in the establishment. A number of candidates and potential candidates were on hand, giving the gathering an importance it had not been expected to carry.

GARNER LIKENS HIS BANTAMS TO FOLK AT CAPITAL

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 14 (AP).—John N. Garner finds a perfect parallel between Washington and the bantam chickens in his own back yard.

Reg Manning, cartoonist for the Arizona Republic, returned from Uvalde, Tex., with this account of a visit with the Vice President:

Without preliminaries Manning was taken directly to the chicken yard. There Garner doled out liberal appropriations of grain and philosophized:

"You know you can see every character here that you'll find in Washington.

"There's the quiet ones that get right in there and tend to business. They're the best layers. And look at that stuffed shirt. He spends so much time rushing around to see how much the others are getting that he loses out on most of it himself. See that cocky one? He looks just like a lobbyist. The ones that don't lay? We always take a dozen canned banties back to Washington with us. They make fine dumplings."

A presidential candidate? Garner pointed again to his chickens. They run if he calls them. "If I am called I will run," Manning quoted him.

REVIVES COUNCIL DRIVE TO PLACE BAN ON TOY GUNS

Ald. H. L. Brody [29th], chairman of the council judiciary committee, said yesterday that he will call a meeting of the committee soon to consider a proposed ordinance to prohibit the sale of toy pistols. The proposal was first submitted to the council last spring, with Brody's recommendation that it pass.

"However," Brody said yesterday, "several aldermen objected that it did not specify or differentiate between dangerous looking toy pistols and, for instance, glass toy pistols filled with candy. They argued, 'You'll be making criminals out of a lot of innocent children.' So I recalled the ordinance, at the council's request.

"It now appears the police department is again disturbed because many crimes are committed with toy guns. The committee will investigate to see if a measure that will satisfy all sides cannot be devised."

SENATOR CALLS FOR BEST ARMY, BUT NOT LARGEST

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—Senator Elmer Thomas [D., Okla.] reported today that congress members who inspected military facilities on a 14,000 mile air tour agreed that the United States should strive for not the largest but the most effective and the best army in the world.

Acting as spokesman for the groups of senators and representatives, Thomas predicted that they would make these recommendations to the forthcoming session of congress:

Enlargement of airports, fewer but larger army posts, speeding up production of semiautomatic rifles, modernizing field artillery, and special and immediate attention to defense against air raids.

GEORGE WASHINGTON SAID:

"Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities."—From the Farewell Address.

DOMESTIC POLITICS AND FOREIGN POLICY.

The foreign policy of the United States is not a nonpolitical question. As Senator Borah said in his letter to Allen W. Dulles of New York, it would be a mistake for Republicans to regard foreign relations as outside political discussion and as having no bearing on issues to be decided. In many respects internal affairs and foreign policies are tied together. The welfare of the United States may depend upon what its government undertakes to do abroad. There is unfinished business of the most serious nature with Japan, affecting the United States at home and thruout the Pacific. Congress will be faced with tha next month.

American neutrality in the wars abroad is not a closed question. It is still open to the influence of events, opinions, and even ambitions. An adjournment of politics—a goofy phrase for these times—would mean that the people and their representatives had surrendered themselves to whatever decisions a government wanted to make for them. It may be that foreign policy, with its direct bearing upon internal affairs, will be one of the principal issues next year. In our foreign relations may be found factors affecting our economic system, our social order, and our form of government.

If America keeps out of entanglements, avoids alliances, and refrains from intervention, it may approach its domestic problems with the prospect of handling them wisely. If these domestic problems are complicated by foreign disturbances the prospect may be something quite different. The question of American finance at peace is a different question from that of America's finance in war. The form of government which we may bring out of the next election, if the campaign finds the people concentrated upon domestic problems, might be a very different kind of government from that they would obtain if they held an election in the midst of foreign alarms or in conflict. Foreign relations have changed the character of governments in Europe and foreign policy could have that effect here. Every person in the United States may be vitally affected by the conduct of American foreign affairs and it can be said now that the attitude of the government in Washington is none too reassuring.

All the proofs available indicate that the American people desire to preserve their independence in foreign affairs; that they reject the idea of international obligations which would force them to war, and that they want their government to conduct itself as a sober-minded custodian of American interests. These desires will not be satisfied if they have no expression in political action. If the political leaders should abandon foreign policy as an issue the government would be able to do as it pleased, regardless of public opinion, and the consequences of such a procedure are not to be regarded lightly.

HUMANITARIAN MR. SMITH.

Mr. F. Lynden Smith, in addition to being Gov. Horner's state director of public works, Gov. Horner's campaign manager, and until recently boss of Gov. Horner's 2 per cent shakedown club, is a great humanitarian. Not, of course, The Great Humanitarian, but nevertheless a pretty good grade A great humanitarian. Mr. Smith says so himself.

Before Mr. Smith applied his great heart and agile mind to the shakedown business it was conducted in horrendous manner. Mr. Smith says so himself. County Democratic chairmen used to go around to state employés and put the bite on them at $50 or $100 per bite.

This was very distressing to the employés. Their family budgets, says Mr. Smith, were disarranged. Presumably they didn't pay the grocer that month, and the kiddies went to school with holes in their shoes. His heart swelling with sympathy, Mr. Smith arranged to put the racket on a budget basis, just like cutting off the dog's tail an inch at a time. Mr. Smith's bonded shakedown artists went around and put a mild bite, just a 2 per cent bite, on the boys every pay day.

"I wanted to keep their jobs safe," explains the humanitarian Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith also says that he is tired of being called the front man for the Illinoisans, which is the name under which the clip artists operate. He doesn't indicate that he is tired of the shakedown racket itself. He just wishes people would quit mentioning his name in connection with it. Mr. Smith's hide is almost as tender as his heart.

THE MUSEUM TRUSTEES MEET THEMSELVES.

The present difficulties that Chicago museums are experiencing with their tax rate have a rich comic side that tends to obscure the genuine gravity of the situation.

For years the Art institute, the Field Museum of Natural History and the Shedd aquarium have divided a small tax levy. Since they are not public institutions the levy is collected and paid over to them by the park board. The Supreme court has now held that this museum levy shall be included in the maximum sum of the pegged levy that the park board is authorized to make for its own corporate purposes. The effect of this is to cut the park system's own funds by the amount of the museum levy, and in consequence the park board says it will not vote a museum levy for 1940.

The case on which the Supreme court ruled was an objection by a taxpayer to the 1935 park levy. A number of estates and corporations made this same objection to their tax bills. There is nothing reprehensible about a taxpayer objecting to an illegal tax, but the comic aspect of the case is that several of the men who in their capacity as taxpayers knocked out the levy are in their civic capacity trustees of the institutions that benefit from it. Their right hands have found out what their left hands were doing and there's the devil to pay in the trustees' lounges.

The operation of the three institutions that share the museum tax will be seriously if not fatally hampered by its loss. The tax is a legitimate public expenditure. It is largely thru its receipt that the museums are able to continue the free days which open their doors to the poorest citizen.

While the park commissioners can argue that it was the intent of the legislature that the whole of the park pegged levy should be used for park purposes, the proposal to shut off the museum revenue merely because levying the tax will give the park board less money to spend does not stand careful scrutiny.

A considerable part of the park corporate fund is used each year for more intensive development of the park system, for extensions, if not of acreage, at least of facilities. It is folly thus to extend the park system while denying support to equally valuable recreational facilities that already exist. The paintings in the Art institute have as great if not more cultural value than Commissioner Petrillo's concerts, and the Hall of Man gives pleasure to as many people as a score of tennis courts.

If the legislature will straighten out the mess by placing the museum levy outside the park corporate levy, there can be no objection. The reported failure of Gov. Horner to reply to requests that he include that proposal in his call of the expected special session is strange. But if no legislative remedy is obtained, the proposal of the park board to cut off the museums' revenue in order to increase its own spending power is indefensible.

BIGGER BIG CITIES.

Shoe manufacturers in small towns in the St. Louis area are preparing an appeal to the courts against the minimum wage set for shoe workers under the federal wages and hours act. The manufacturers say that the difference in living costs between the large cities and the small towns was not taken into account and should have been.

At the time the law was being debated the prediction was made that it would tend to drive industry from the small towns to the great cities. The big cities exist by virtue of cheap and ready access to raw materials and markets, superior transportation facilities, and numerous other economies in manufacture and distribution. The chief compensating advantage of the small town is cheaper labor. As was pointed out at the time the law was proposed, this does not necessarily mean a lower living standard for small town workmen. Rents in the country towns are lower and many items of food are also cheaper. The employé can walk to work and save himself not only carfare but an hour or more of discomfort in a crowded street car every day.

The wage differentials made small town industry possible. Now that advantage is being whittled away and it seems altogether likely that the trend toward decentralization of industry will be reversed. The small towns will grow smaller and the big cities bigger. These consequences were foreseen when the law was being discussed in congress; nevertheless, the law received support from a great many congressmen representing small town constituents.

If these voters find their home town factories abandoned and the machinery moved to the big cities; if the tax rolls decline and the towns contain many vacant houses, the voters will know where to place the blame. The big cities didn't ask for this legislation, but it looks as if they may benefit materially from it.

Editorial of the Day

TWO-MINDED AMERICANS.
[Des Moines Register.]

Americans are double-tracking their minds at a fearful rate. Ability to concentrate on two things at once is getting so common that no one thinks anything of it any more.

Radio has had a great deal to do with it. Reading while listening to the radio long ago became so common that announcers fairly shriek their "commercials"—or the volume control man does it for them. This in turn has offered a new challenge to the reader's concentration which he has duly met. Surely a nation which can read the sport page calmly thru a thundered admonition to buy the genuine So-and-So's pills is forever immune to a Hitler.

After reading and listening came driving and listening. Driving a powerful car thru intersections and traffic demands more concentration than anything most of the human race attempts, yet Americans have added counterpoint in the form of radio and manage very nicely.

Now we find football fans taking a portable radio with them to the stadium so that they can listen to one game while watching another—and Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., taking a portable to his mother's box in the diamond horseshoe of the Metropolitan, so he can listen to short wave programs along with the opera!

A friend of ours says the only time he has to read our editorials is while he is shaving and listening to the news over the radio. And the other day the wife actually said to us: "Come on, I'll beat you at chess while I read the evening paper."

Nothing is sacred any more, not even chess.

COME, KITTY!

May: "My fiancé is telling everybody in India that he is coming home to marry the most beautiful girl in the world."

Edna: "Too bad, darling, after being engaged to you for such a long time."—Toronto Globe.

MEMORIES OF "DOUG" SR.

The passing of Douglas Fairbanks caused us to try to recall his appearances on the Chicago stage before he became the smiling athlete and gay adventurer of the movies. His career before the footlights covered 15 years, but his engagements here were infrequent. The first, we think, was in the dramatization of Frank Norris' novel, "The Pit," in which he had the rôle of Landry Court; that was in midwinter 1903-'04, at the Garrick theater. The Iroquois theater fire [Dec. 30, 1903] happened half a block away from the scene of his activities, but neither cast nor audience knew anything of it until the matinée ended.

"The Pit" dealt with a panic in the wheat market, and dozens of clerks from Board of Trade offices were engaged as supernumeraries. Some of these youngsters, herded together backstage, thought that the actresses who passed by, in evening dress, were fair game for jocular remarks, but Douglas Fairbanks, with a friendly smile, quieted them.

"Boys, I wouldn't do that," he said. "Those ladies deserve to be treated as if they were your mothers or sisters." [From the memoirs of Contributor "A Looper," who was among the "supes."]

Chicago did not see Fairbanks, we believe, in two of his longest runs, "The Man of the Hour" and "A Gentleman from Mississippi," for they were acted here in duplicate companies. [Will Deming, now dead, had Fairbanks' rôle in the latter.]

We may have seen him in "Clothes" [1907], and we certainly saw him in "Officer 666" [1912], "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." [1912], and "The New Henrietta" [1913]. His movie career began in 1915.

Fairbanks' fondness for leaps from balconies and windows was paralleled, curiously enough, by an actor who left a black mark in history. He was John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Lincoln. Booth, too, had the instincts of a chamois, and his agility figured in his murderous scheme. You may remember that he leaped from Lincoln's box to the stage in escaping—and also that an American flag caught his spur and doomed him with a crippling injury.

CHRISTMAS REFLECTION.

Christmas season is a mirror
Into which each heart
Looks, and sees its own reflection.
That is why a part
Of the world is glad and gay
When it comes to Christmas Day.

If your Christmas is a burden—
If your heart, this time, each year
Is indifferent, sad or weary,
You will see no Christmas cheer.
You, yourself, the blame must carry
If your Christmas is not merry.

The Folklore of Music Criticism.

I can trump John Kelley's story of the reporter who wrote one sentence about the opening of the Auditorium and then passed into a stupor [Dec. 12]. Up in St. Paul, years ago, there was a music critic who had a habit of drenching himself in some rare and potent liqueur on great occasions. One night he covered the debut of a St. Paul tenor, returned from studies in Europe. Our critic teetered into the city room about 1 a. m., gravely handed in his "copy," and weaved out into the night. This is what he had written:

Mordaunt Pulsifer sang again before a St. Paul audience last night after two years' study in Europe. As I sat listening to him and thinking of our boyhood days together here, I became so affected that I have been able to write nothing.

William Shaw.

Research at the Breakfast Table.

I sat leisurely sipping my coffee and reading the Line. When I came to "The Philosophy of Buttonholes" [Dec. 12], I was holding my coffee cup in my right hand, and my left hand automatically went to the front of my house coat to see on which side it was buttoned. And what do you think I discovered? A zipper.

ANSWER TO HIGHBROW RETORT.

May I voice a protest against the frequent asseveration
That every easy answer constitutes oversimplification?
As man seems to become more and more superior,
His general outlook gets more complex and drearier.
Maybe, if he tried to be reasonably simple,
Many of his troubles would be reduced to the proportions of a pimple.
An uninflated toy balloon may not have much class,
But it can't suffer from gastritis 'til it's all blown up with gas,
And even then, with all its huffing and puffing
It's just the same balloon, magnified by overstuffing.

Them Were the Happy Days.

Shall we reminisce about some nice old saloons and restaurants on the north side circuit before the floor shows and taverns crashed in on us? . . . There was the Bismarck Garden, superb eating and drinking, fine open air concerts. . . . Farther north on Evanston avenue [now Broadway] there was Pop Morse's, later the Green Mill, where Sophie Tucker and Helen Morgan got their starts in life. . . . Then the Winona Gardens and the Argyle, where the movie mimes from the Essanay studio used to relax—Gloria Swanson, the Beery boys, Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, and Charlie Chaplin. . . . Still farther north, and later, the Northern Lights at Devon and Broadway, where one night old Shoes, the tough copper, slapped a famous hoodlum's face and took away his roscoe.

The other night some of us not too old playboys compiled a list of 38 of such happy places, all gone with the foam. For example, the Edelweiss, the Rienzi, the Tip-Top, the Friars, Al Tierney's. Then for life in the rough and raw, the Arsonia and the Bucket of Blood.

SO-CALLED "BRAIN FOOD."

When the distinguished chemist, Jacob M. Moleschott, uttered his oft-repeated aphorism—"No thought without phosphorus"—there was immediate acceptance in many quarters of the dictum that life could be interpreted in terms of chemistry. Here was the vital element, the basic substance that activated all mental processes. But the saying was based upon superficial observations. While brain cells contain phosphorous, this constituent is no more potent than nitrogen, carbon, hydrogen, or a score of others.

Of course, there was an immediate boom in the fish industry when it was pointed out that the denizens of our streams, lakes, and oceans yielded a fair amount of this material. Not yet have we recovered from the popular but erroneous conception that fish is a "brain food" furnishing everything needed to convert a dull individual into a brilliant one.

Another common delusion which should be dispelled is that milk or cream should never be ingested when fish is served. The fact is that butter, cream, and all dairy products may be employed in the preparation of tasty meals. Additional fat brings out the characteristic flavor and may be an added source of nourishment, especially with children and invalids. Creamed dishes of all sorts are wholesome.

Yes, fish is one of the best sources of nutriment that we possess. With many varieties there is little waste and while not so rich in nitrogen as meat, nevertheless it supplies more gelatin and fewer of the ingredients that predispose to gout. On the whole, it is easily digested, altho something depends upon the percentage of fat. If one has trouble with salmon because of its higher ratio of oil, cod and haddock may be utilized without difficulty.

But cooking is important and baking or steaming is greatly preferred to frying. This latter procedure exposes the surfaces to a very high temperature and the article may appear to be done thru long before it actually is. Deep fat, however, may be used, but the surplus cottonseed or olive oil should be allowed to drain away and not soak into the flakes.

Minerals, as we know, are essential to the normal behavior of the body. Iodine is one of the most indispensable, and all sea foods have a full measure of it. Furthermore, there is also a substantial proportion of calcium, sulfur, potassium, and even iron.

From the standpoint of economy much will depend upon the proximity to the markets. Cod, haddock, and herring are relatively cheap—that is, when one figures up the calories. In regions remote from the seacoast and where iced shipments are not available, canned salmon offers a goodly bit of nutriment for the sum expended.

Lobster and crab meat may disturb delicate stomachs because the fibers are coarse. Lobsters should be boiled at least 45 minutes. The reason is that the intestine of this crustacean may harbor disease producing germs and—in order to insure their destruction—the preparation period should be at least three-fourths of an hour. Many housewives have learned the trick of resorting to vinegar, which aids in predigesting the muscles.

While oysters contain a high percentage of water, nevertheless the solid parts are quite valuable because of their protein and starch [in the form of glycogen]. Here cooking tends to toughen the fibers, hence bivalves are frequently taken raw as they are more digestible. But one would need to consume a generous quantity to provide a square meal of, let us say, 800 calories.

Clams, mussels, and scallops—delectable as they are—can scarcely be regarded as having much food value. However, if oily dressings or sauces are used, one may make a fairly substantial snack.

Many of us include some representative of the finny tribe in the menu at least once each week. So far as health is concerned, this is of real benefit as little effort is required on the part of the digestive machinery.

BURNING FEET.

Mrs. A. V. S. writes: My mother, 70 years old, suffers from burning feet. She has this trouble as much in the winter as in the summer. What can be done for it?

REPLY.

Probably due to a disturbance of the nerve supply or the circulation or both. She should wear loose, roomy shoes or slippers and thin hose. The blood flow to the extremities may be stimulated by warm foot baths, followed by massage. Your family doctor should be consulted, as some systemic disease may be hovering in the offing.

SLOW HEALING.

G. R. writes: When I scratch or cut my skin, healing is not completed for two or three months. Does this mean "bad blood?"

REPLY.

Not "bad" but "poor." Delayed healing may be due to some systemic disturbance Diabetes or lowered resistance from some cause must be considered. A physical check up is advised.

IN THE MUNI-SIPPLE COURT.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—In Mr. Morgenstern's article on the Municipal court in yesterday's TRIBUNE, his opening paragraph is as follows:

Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! The Municipal court is now in session, pursuant to adjournment.

It is apparent Mr. Morgenstern has not attended many sessions of the Municipal court. The court usually opens as follows:

Bang! Bang! ! Bang! ! ! Everybody stand up. Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! This honorable branch of the Muni-sipple court of Chicago is now in session persoont to adjournment. Everybody find seats and stop yer loud talkin'.

In view of this, it is interesting to recall that in the early days of Cook county it was not customary for the bar to rise when the judge entered. The Chicago Bar association, as a mark of respect to the court, voluntarily suggested that all of the bar—i. e., the attorneys inside of the rail, rise at the entrance of the judge and remain standing until he took his seat. This mark of respect, voluntarily given, was really worth something, but respect coerced by the loud banging of the bailiff's gavel doesn't mean a thing.

WILLIAM R. T. EWEN.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S ACTIVITIES.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Mrs. Roosevelt is setting a dangerous precedent by her attendance at the Dies committee sessions; by her prejudiced attempts to belittle the work of this group; both thru her position and thru the medium of a widely read newspaper column that owes its existence and appeal to the fact that she is the President's wife.

We are not particularly concerned, at the moment, as to whether there is truth in the accusations of communism in the American Youth congress; that is something for the Dies committee to decide. We are, however, alarmed by having the wife of the chief executive make a public spectacle of herself as the champion of groups accused of acts subversive to the best good of our government.

F. W. B.

JAMES JOYCE IS IRISH.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—In the Wednesday book review comes the heading, "English Novels," and the first item is "Finnegan's Wake," by James Joyce. Ye gods, when will THE TRIBUNE wake up from the "English" trance? An Irish story by an Irish author labeled "English" and the reviewer gabbles a lot of inanities of its incomprehensiveness.

F. G. W.

SUGGESTS A "HUMAN SHOW."

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Now that the animals at the stockyards show were found to be well fed and physically fit there should be a show for the people. It will be extremely interesting to see the physical examinations of the people and the animals compared, side by side. Of course, the animals will have an easy time winning.

DEATH'S RENDEZVOUS.

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 12.—Death met another victim on Sunday morning at the Ridgeland avenue crossing of the Garfield elevated road in Oak Park.

Signal lights are used on the elevated on curves. These lights show green when the curves are clear and they show red when the trains have not cleared the curves.

Why couldn't a similar system of lights be installed on the right of way near busy grade crossings on the Garfield and Lake street branches so that when the crossing gates are up the signal light will show red and only change to green when the gates are completely lowered?

OAK PARKER.

QUERY FOR THE WPA.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Why is it some people working for the WPA are permitted to work 21 months and others are handed slips before their time is up? People with grown children working are permitted to work 21 months and the people with small children are laid off before their time is up. Something is wrong, but where?

INQUISITIVE.

SISSIES BY COMPARISON.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—College football players are a bunch of sissies compared to soccer players. The gridiron gladiators are protected from head to foot with thick clothing while the soccer players scamper about in track suits and their season does not end its outdoor play until January.

SOCCERITE.

QUERY FOR AN EMPLOYER.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—One of your readers advises that several of his employés, after an absence of a few years from his employ, became demoralized and consequently unfit for private employment. He blames their downfall to the New Deal, and the WPA in particular. He blames the crash for the loss of his business, but is fair enough not to blame the New Deal for that, too.

Several of us would like to know what remedy he would prescribe for the existence of many million men, women, and children left destitute by the crash of '29. He may tell us what else this or any other administration could have done for the support of the one-third of our population left broke, jobless, and hungry.

WHICH DEPENDS ON WHICH?

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 13.—In seeking funds for the University of Chicago, President Hutchins contends that the existence of democracy depends upon the existence of the university.

The public ought to know that not so long ago the university authorized communists to hold a meeting on "The Strategy of a Revolution."

In view of communist activities abroad, it seems that Hutchins would be more accurate if he contended that as long as the university exists democracy will be endangered.

MOTHER'S PENSION.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 7 [Legal Friend of the People].—In answer to the above notation, let me explain that I did not refer to "widows as such" as you put it. This is what I wrote: "Kindly inform me where I can apply for a widow or mother's pension. I understand there are such [pensions] in Illinois." "Such" referring to "pensions" not "widows." Some misinterpretation in your office.

MRS. E. S.

Illinois has no pension for widows as such. Sec 332 of Chap. 23 of the Illinois Revised Statutes lists the following conditions for granting the so-called "Mother's Pension."

1. The children must be living with the mother.
2. It must be for their welfare to remain at home.
3. The relief must make the difference between committing the children to an institution and enabling the mother to remain at home.
4. The mother must be a proper person.
5. The relief must be needed to save the children from neglect.
6. The mother's property must not exceed $1,000.
7. She must have resided in this country one year.
8. She must have no relatives obliged and able to support.

Due to shortage of funds there is a waiting list of about 1,500 cases involving a time lag of 1½ to 2 years. No applications are being taken where there is only one child under 16 nor in cases where the husband has deserted or is incapacitated and in the home, so that the available funds are concentrated on widows and women whose husbands are in institutions because of incapacities.

THE WORLD WAR 25 YEARS AGO

[From Tribune Files.]

Dec. 15, 1914.

[140th day of world war: 106th day of present war.]

ROME.—Feeling against the Turks is increasing in Italy. The Italian foreign office has not yet received Turkey's reply to the Italian demands resulting from the Turkish attack on the Italian consulate at Hodeida. The Turkish ambassador here explains the delay as due to congestion of the telegraphs and says he is convinced that Turkey will accede to the demands of the note. It is probable that Turkey will be given a time limit for her reply.

PARIS.—In addition to Russia and Turkey, France has refused to accept Pope Benedict's proposal for a truce between the belligerent powers during the Christmas season.

LONDON.—The Servians, after a severe battle with the Austrian army, have reoccupied their capital, Belgrade. This indicates the failure of the second Austrian invasion of Servia.

PARIS.—All the street lamps in Paris were extinguished at midnight last night. The reason for this unprecedented precaution is said to have been the receipt of a report that two German Zeppelin dirigible balloons had been sighted at Amiens proceeding in the direction of Paris.

ANSWER

Decide to Invite Friends to Share Spirit.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Two well dressed men walked into Tribune Tower yesterday and went to the desk of the editor of the Good Fellow campaign. They were commercial artists with offices on Michigan avenue.

Good Fellow button.

They first inquired all about the Good Fellow work, how the names were selected for those families which will receive the baskets of food, toys, and candy at Christmas time, and whether they were expected to take the baskets themselves.

Decide to Write Friends.

Mr. A. turned to his companion and said: "It seems to me that this is the way to carry out our Christmas charity." Then they explained that for years they had been buying high priced gifts for some of their business friends at Christmas time. This year they are going to be Good Fellows and are planning to send their friends this note:

"Dear Bill:

"For years it has been our pleasure to send you a little Christmas gift. This year we are going to invite you to join us in being Good Fellows. The money that we have usually spent on you will buy heaping baskets of happiness for some poor families. We are getting our names from the Chicago Tribune Good Fellow bureau and that bureau will take our money and buy the baskets. On Saturday morning, Dec. 23, these baskets will be delivered to our office. Won't you join us in helping to deliver them to these unfortunate people? I'm sure that we all will have a merrier Christmas?

Mr. A and Mr. B have an idea to offer hundreds of business people in Chicago and suburbs. And if their example is followed thousands more boys and girls would know the true meaning of Christmas.

Will Give Auto Revenue.

Irving Wasserman, manager of the Ben Alpert, Inc., parking lot south of Tribune Tower on the lower level at 401 North Michigan avenue, will give the entire revenue from the cars parked there Sunday evening to the Good Fellow fund.

This will be a convenience for the 600 people who attend the "Your Sunday Date" Good Fellow broadcast, from 8 to 8:30 o'clock in the W-G-N audience studio.

You may participate in one of the three Good Fellow plans by signing the accompanying Good Fellow coupon and sending it to the bureau located at 1 South Dearborn street.

Slain with Fist in Tavern Fight; Killer Gets Away

Stephen Flahrity, 40 years old, was fatally injured last night in a fist fight in front of 551 West Madison street with an unidentified red haired man, about 35, who escaped. Flahrity lived in South Clark street. Police said he and the other man got into a dispute in a tavern at the Madison street entrance, went outside and exchanged blows. Flahrity died in the Jefferson Park hospital.

MUSIC RINGS OUT CHRISTMAS JOY TO LOOP CROWDS

Christmas music, transmitted by a series of loudspeakers, rang thru the crowded loop streets yesterday. It was the first of the holiday season's concerts, sponsored by the State Street council and the Downtown council. Mayor Kelly opened the program with a brief talk from a microphone in the Republic building and the music came from W-G-N, the TRIBUNE radio station.

"There is a Santa Claus," said the mayor, "and there is nothing more real and wholesome in our American life than the spirit of Christmas."

Similar programs will be presented twice daily until Christmas, with the music supplied by the city's fifteen radio stations. The concerts are to be held from noon until 2 p. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m.

Pedestrian traffic continued to jam the main shopping streets yesterday. Police doubled the detail assigned to handling the crowds at intersections. Capt. David Flynn, in charge of the detail, has estimated that the crowds are larger this year than at any Christmas season in twenty years.

Read the typical statements at right. They show these men found Old Quaker not only rich in flavor—mild and delightfully smooth—but so low in price that they actually save up to $1.48 a quart on every bottle they buy.

FABYAN'S ESTATE PURCHASED FOR A FOREST PRESERVE

Kane County Gets Lavish Place for $70,500.

No longer need those who pass the Fabyan estate south of Geneva wonder what lies beyond its walls and its trees. Next summer picnickers may wander thru its Japanese sunken gardens and bathe in its marble swimming pools, and gaze upon the oriental art in the spacious home that was designed by Frank Lloyd Wright.

The 240 acre estate was bought for $70,500 yesterday by the Kane county forest preserve commissioners. The commissioners said the late Col. George Fabyan spent $800,000 improving it during the 33 years that it was his home. They will incorporate it in the county's forest preserve.

Lies on the Fox River.

The estate lies on either side of the Fox river. If canoes are provided, visitors will be able to paddle thru the estate and past the island upon which are situated one of the swimming pools and an ornamental lighthouse.

On the estate are greenhouses, in which rare plants grow and cages which may become again the home of zoo animals. An old Dutch wind mill is one of the sights. It had been long abandoned after half a century of service when Col. Fabyan decided to grind his own flour in 1915. He bought the mill and moved it to his estate.

The commissioners plan to make a museum of the mansion. Altho some of its art works are to be removed, many are to be left. The purchase includes another museum set up by Col. Fabyan.

Built Fortune in Dry Goods.

Col. Fabyan came to Chicago in 1893 as representative of Bliss, Fabyan & Co. of New York and Boston. This was a concern operating cotton mills and dealing in dry goods, in which his father, George S. Fabyan, was associated with Cornelius N. Bliss, who was later McKinley's secretary of the interior.

Wealthy from his business and his interitance, Col. Fabyan retired in 1903 to live on the Fox river. He built a home, stables for thorobred stock, and kennels for dogs. He built, too, the Riverbank laboratories, which are not included in the forest preserve purchase.

In the laboratories he experimented with acoustics and advanced the science of cryptography. He was credited with organizing the cryptographical branch of the intelligence service to decipher codes during the war. To teach the men of the community trench fighting, he had trenches dug on the grounds and hired instructors for them.

Col. Fabyan died May 17, 1936. His widow, Mrs. Nelle Fabyan, died last July 22. The sale was made by the trustees of her estate, Maulsby Forrest and Miss Belle Cumming.

FORTY FOOT TREE MOVED TO PARK BOARD BUILDING

A tree surgeon, four expert assistants, and 10 park district laborers worked yesterday to move a 50 year old American elm tree from the west shore of Burnham park lagoon to the west end of the new park district administration building at the north end of Soldiers' field. The three is 72 inches around a foot above the ground, about 40 feet high, and was planted in blue clay, which made uprooting difficult. A ball of earth 15 feet in diameter was left around the roots when the tree was loaded on a truck. If anybody wanted to buy and move a similar tree it would cost him about $1,000.

SCHOOLGIRL LOVE AFFAIRS TOLD AT DYNAMITE TRIAL

Superintendent 'Dated' Pupils, Court Hears.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 14.—The love affairs of E. Ross Wyatt, 36 years old, former superintendent of schools at Brookeland, Tex., came in for further revealment in today's session of his trial on charges of burglary with intent to commit murder.

The prosecution seeks to show that so great was the violence of his affection that when a girl turned him down he bombed her with dynamite. That was the gist of yesterday's testimony of Mary Jo Miller, his former secretary, who came here from Oak Park, Ill., where she is a physical education teacher, to testify against him.

The State's Charges.

The state charges that Wyatt tried to kill Miss Miller because she spurned his love for seven years and fled to Illinois in 1937 to escape his attentions. She was visiting her brother, J. H. Miller, in Dallas on July 25, 1938, when the dynamite was set off in a bedroom in which she slept. The house was wrecked, but she escaped with bruises.

Yesterday Miss Miller, who is 26 years old, testified that she kept company with Wyatt and submitted to his hugging and kissing because he was her boss and she needed her job teaching in Brookeland.

The state rested its case today. Shortly before this, the defense recalled Miss Miller to the stand. Under cross-examination she testified that Mrs. Leila Wyatt, the defendant's wife, who later divorced him, came to her in 1933 during the early stages of the affair and that they reached a quiet "understanding."

Other Women Mentioned.

Miss Miller said they quietly discussed not only her affair with Wyatt but also his relations with other women, including high school girls in the community.

"Don't think he cares about you, because he doesn't," Miss Miller quoted Mrs. Wyatt as warning her. "I know he has dates with other girls, and goes with one of his high school students, Thelma Powell," the witness swore the wife told her.

Miss Miller said Wyatt's wife told her that his activities with other women had "worried me" for the past few years.

Mrs. Wyatt is expected to testify on behalf of her ex-husband. He opened his defense guns today with an alibi that he was helping a sister-in-law, Mrs. Sybil Wyatt, wash clothes in Hemphill, Tex., on March 10, 1938, the day on which state witnesses placed him in Shreveport, La., 100 miles away, buying 100 sticks of dynamite.

The sister-in-law testified, blushing the while, that she remembered the date because she had kept a diary.

FEDERAL JURORS INDICT 2 IN MINE STOCKS SWINDLE

Two mining company officials were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday on charges of using the mails to defraud and of violating the securities and exchange act thru sale of $87,000 in fake securities to 300 investors in 30 states. They are William L. Dickelman, 3827 North Wilton avenue, and Scott R. Weinland, 1456 East 71st place.

The defendants operated from offices at 10 North Clark street, according to the indictment, selling securities in two companies, the Westcoast Minerals company and the Westcoast Minerals Company, Ltd.

The indictments were returned before Judge William H. Holly, who set bond for each defendant at $5,000. It was the last act of the November grand jury, which was discharged on the order of William J. Campbell, United States district attorney.

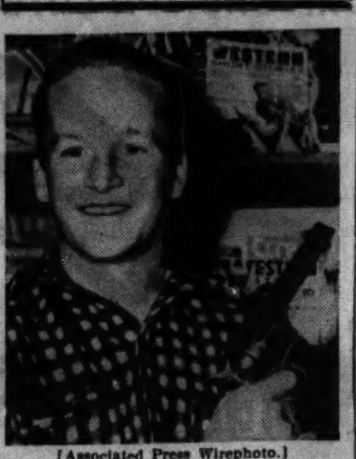
Subdues Bandit



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

John Bowlen with old-fashioned unloaded pistol he used to subdue bandit in Fort Worth, Tex.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 14 [Special].—John Bowlen, 20, a drug store delivery boy, had a hunch yesterday and today he is more or less a hero. When a call to the store aroused his suspicion he took along an old-fashioned frontier pistol on the delivery trip. It was unloaded, but with it he subdued a would-be robber.

NEW INDICTMENT VOTED IN INDIANA RELIEF SCANDAL

A grand jury investigating relief frauds in the three largest townships of Lake county, Indiana, returned its second indictment yesterday. The indictment charged Nick Roknich, proprietor of a clothing store at 1036 Broadway in Gary, with making misrepresentations in order to get relief funds.

Roknich is accused of filing a false claim for $14 worth of clothing issued to a colored reliefer. The claim was approved and paid, but it was reported the reliefer told the grand jurors he never received the clothing.

The inquiry, which has been in progress since July, concerns Calumet, North, and Hobart townships, where in 1938 a total of $3,500,000 was spent for relief.

NEW SLUSH FUND INQUIRY ORDERED BY CIVIC GROUP

Union League Club to Get Report on Levies.

A thoro inquiry into the operations of the Illinoisans, the Democratic fund raising agency which has been collecting 2 per cent salary assessments from state employés—both civil service and unclassified—for the party's 1940 state campaign, was ordered yesterday by the civil service committee of the Union League club.

The committee, after a two hour session, voted to appoint a three man subcommittee to make the investigation. This group will be headed by Attorney Perry T. Ten Hoor, chairman of the parent civil service committee. He said the subcommittee will begin its inquiry immediately and hopes to have a full report ready within two weeks.

Carry Letters from Bowen.

Until complaints grew too numerous, Illinoisans' collectors often set up headquarters for their soliciting within state institutions. Most of them carried "courtesy" letters from A. L. Bowen, state director of public welfare.

Later, after criticisms by the Civil Service Protective association, the collectors moved into hotels near the institutions and conducted their levies from there. H. A. Stone, one of the Illinoisan workers, was questioned in a Joliet hotel on Dec. 5 by State's Attorney James E. Burke of Will county. Stone admitted he was collecting funds from guards at Joliet and Stateville prisons, and defied Burke to do anything about it.

Charges $500,000 Levy.

Dwight H. Green, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, has asserted that $500,000 annually is being exacted from state employés, and that the Horner administration, thru the funds raising agency, is using state funds to perpetuate itself in office.

State's Attorney Charles A. O'Connor of Kane county, where the St. Charles School for Boys, the Geneva School for Girls, and the Elgin State hospital are situated, has pledged himself to start grand jury proceedings against the Illinoisans if his investigators discover violations of the civil service law.

SUBPENAS FOR 75 GIVEN IN FEDERAL QUIZ ON BUILDING

Inquiry Expected to Begin Early Next Month.

Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe yesterday issued subpenas for 25 individuals and 50 corporations to produce their business records before a federal grand jury in the long awaited investigation into Chicago's building industry.

Leo F. Tierney.

All the names are being kept secret to enable government agents to serve the summonses on the prospective witnesses. The subpenas were made returnable Jan. 2, the day the inquiry is scheduled to start.

Leo F. Tierney, assistant attorney general in charge of the government's antitrust investigations here, got the subpenas when he appeared in United States District court with four of the 12 special assistants he has qualified to handle the building inquiry.

Case Prepared for Long Time.

The action was seen as indicating that the government is now ready to push its investigation promptly, beginning early next month. It has spent months in preparation.

The government is seeking to find out why building has bogged down in Chicago. The investigation is expected to go into alleged combinations of contractors and unions to fix prices or control the use of materials in restraint of trade and other phases of alleged racketeering in the industry.

It was reported that the first witnesses will be contractors, manufacturers, and union officials in the tile industry. It was said that most of the subpenas will be served in Chicago, but that several will go to Joliet and Elgin.

The government's preliminary investigation, conducted from special offices at 208 South La Salle street, is reported to have covered the period from Jan. 1, 1934, to Dec. 31, 1938. It is expected that more than 200 witnesses from all divisions of the building industry will be summoned. The new grand jury, which is to be impaneled Monday, probably will work on the cases for at least two months.

Ice Cream Case to Be Restated.

Tierney yesterday confirmed a report from Washington that the government soon will re-present to the grand jury its antitrust investigation of the ice cream industry.

Twenty persons and 20 corporations in the ice cream industry were indicted for an alleged conspiracy to restrain the distribution of counter freezers, which are used by retailers and restaurants to make ice cream. Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan, however, threw out the case together with an antitrust case against the milk industry.

The milk case was reinstated by the United States Supreme court, but the government failed to appeal the ice cream case.

Mixed U.S. Jury Convicts Two in White Slave Case

Glenn Henderson, 47 years old, and Wilbur Hunt, 35, were found guilty last evening by a jury before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward of violating the Mann act. It was the first so-called white slave case tried before a mixed jury in this federal court district.

FEDERAL COURT BATTLE OPENED FOR O'HARE CASH

Seven Claim $25,000 in Safe Deposit Box.

A legal fight to determine the ownership of $25,000 found in a safe deposit box rented by Edward J. O'Hare, slain front man for the Capone syndicate, was launched yesterday in federal court. It was begun by the National Safe Deposit company, 38 South Dearborn street, which does not claim the money, but wants the court to designate one of seven claimants as the proper owner.

The safe deposit company filed a suit naming these claimants:

John Walter Quinn, former head of the Legal Securities company of Boston, a friend of O'Hare; Edmund L. Dolan, former Boston city treasurer now serving a contempt sentence in connection with the suit of the city of Boston to recover $204,231 of Boston money; Marion J. Dolan and Kathleen E. Dolan, Dolan's sisters; the Northern Trust company, as administrator for the estate of E. J. O'Hare; the city of Boston, and the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance company, which signed a security bond for Dolan.

Each Must Defend Claim.

All of these will now be required to defend their claims in the court action.

O'Hare, president of the Sportsman's Park race track and owner of racing interests near Boston and Miami, was slain Nov. 8 by shotgun assassins. The subsequent investigation disclosed O'Hare's Capone connections. He left an estate estimated at $1,000,000.

Among his safe deposit boxes was one at 38 South Dearborn street. In it state's attorney's police found two envelopes, one containing $10,000, the other $15,000. They were marked: "For the safe keeping of Marion J. and Kathleen E. Dolan."

Claims Quinn Is Walter.

When the box was opened, an attorney for John Walter Quinn, who is serving a contempt sentence with Dolan, appeared and claimed that Quinn is the mysterious "John Walter."

The city of Boston sought the money on the theory that it was part of the funds Nolan is alleged to have taken from the city, and the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance company, surety for Dolan, claimed it on the same ground. The bonding company on Nov. 17 obtained a writ of attachment for the money in the Cook county Circuit court.

The suit to decide ownership of the money was assigned to Judge James H. Wilkerson. Judge Michael L. Igoe, who was hearing Wilkerson's call yesterday, directed that the money be placed in custody of Hoyt King, United States District court clerk, pending disposition of the case.

FIND AUTO USED BY THIEF TO KILL WOMAN VICTIM

Police said yesterday they were following a warm trail in their search for the slayer of Mrs. Ricka Thompson, 64 years old. She was run down and killed Tuesday night near Lawndale and North avenues by the automobile of a purse snatcher.

The car was found abandoned on the northwest side. It had been reported stolen several hours before the motor murder. Mrs. Thompson's purse, with another stolen Tuesday night, was found in an alley near Foster and Milwaukee avenues. From the owner of the second purse police got a description of the thief. They have evidence he is the same man who ran down Mrs. Thompson.

Capt. Charles Pawlowski of the Shakespeare avenue station said the man wanted is about 22 or 23 years old, stands 5 feet 6 inches, and is slim.

CHRISTMAS EVE in Northern Sweden looks like a Yuletide greeting card come to life . . . reindeer drawn sleds and snow-covered evergreens, a bright fire on every hearth and ribbons of smoke from each cottage chimney. And Captain White tells of a grand old Swedish Christmas custom called "Doppa i Gryten," or dipping into the dishpan. Before the holidays, each housewife prepares a huge, heaping pan full of delicious things to eat. Then on Christmas Eve the townsfolk go gaily from house to house, "dipping into the dishpan," singing carols, bringing Yuletide greetings and good cheer. Swedish hospitality has its counterpart in America. In many fine homes Christmas week means Open house. Good friends come and go, bringing gifts and receiving them. Let White Horse enhance this season's festivity. As a gift, or to serve holiday callers, White Horse is a sign of good taste. Match it if you can!

What Judges of Municipal Branches Face.

BY GEORGE MORGENSTERN.

Human degredation parades thru the doors of the Central police building at 1121 South State street. They all come here—those who declare they never got a break, those who think they're entitled to six strikes, the victims of circumstances, the innocent and the guilty, the wise guys and the dopes.

Mothers are among them, with children tugging at their skirts; gunmen in their first long pants, shuffling weary Willies who clutter up the lower reaches of the loop, ladies of easy virtue, social workers, hopheads, pickpockets, panhandlers, drunks, and abandoned wives.

Denials Fill the Air.

They ride up in the elevators, step out, and one file goes this way, one goes that. They trail into the various branches of the Municipal court, and the air becomes alive with their lamentations, their pleadings, their assertions, and their denials.

On a Monday morning, in room 1000, the Racket court, the benches fill up gradually. Here sit the bookies, talking shop, wondering if they'll get back in time for the first race at Charles Town. Splay thumbed characters stand with their hats on their heads, gesticulating with cigar butts.

Judge Jay Schiller, new to this branch of the Municipal court, takes the bench. The clerk begins calling one gambling case after another, first crying, "Search warrant!", then giving the address of the place raided. Lawyers step up.

One notes William Goldstein, personal attorney for William Skidmore, a prize stock breeder but never a member of the 4-H club. Skidmore is the reputed overlord of Chicago gambling.

Mr. B. of B. & B. Enters.

Then there is Attorney Michael Brodkin. Greetings of "Hiya, counselor?" come from friends and admirers. He represents the firm of Brodkin & Bieber, affectionately known as B. & B. in the days when Judge Eugene Holland sat in Racket court. Also present is Larry Dowd, representing clients from the feudal purlieus of Ald. Michael Kenna and Dennis Cooney.

Since Judge Holland's dealings with the late Edward J. O'Hare came to light Racket court has been in bad odor. Judge Holland's record consisting of hearing 12,692 gambling cases in 15 months, liberating 12,624 defendants, and fining 28 crapshooters. Twelve of the fines were remitted and six were appealed. Fines totaling $9 appear to have stuck.

Recently John Hayes, Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby's assistant and walking delegate at 11th and State streets, has seen, first, Judge Stephen Adamowski come to the court, and now Judge Schiller. Hardly had Judge Adamowski taken the bench than he fined three gamblers arrested without warrants. Naturally this set a precedent in Racket court.

This cause célèbre caused the police to rediscover the search warrant.

They Now Ask Jury Trials.

All gamblers are now asking for jury trials. There is fear that Judge Schiller may not follow precedents laid down by Judge Holland. Prospects in Jury court can't be worse, altho four gamblers were fined there last month following the first bookie conviction by a jury in the county's history.

Only once before Judge Schiller does counsel go to trial on the spot. That is when Sergt. Frank O'Sullivan of the commissioner's detail admits chopping down a door in a raid without a warrant. He has two decks of playing cards to show for his zeal.

"This was an outrageous invasion——" cries Attorney Goldstein, by way of developing the constitutional point that a man's gambling joint is his castle.

But the prosecutor has already decided he wants no part of the case and drops it.

Downstairs, in the precincts of Judge J. M. Braude's Women's court, a lounger removes the cud of a cold cigar and, with a preoccupied air, spits against the courtroom wall. An unruly slattern yells, "You can't keep me here!" A brief rumpus follows as two bailiffs shove her into a seat.

The Beauty Parade Is On.

"Ready for the beauty parade?" calls a detective.

With stringy hair, misspotted rouge, and feverish and anxious eyes they advance. One beckons confidentially to the policeman who arrested her. Another slumps in her seat and begins to cry.

Before the judge they vaguely mention aunts in little towns, homes half forgotten. "Promise to go back? If you don't—if you're here again—it's 30 days for you, my girl." One girl strikes this bargain for another chance, then argues where the conditioned sentence will be spent, holding out for the county jail against the Bridewell.

"What difference does it make?" the judge asks wearily. "You say I'm not going to see you again."

He doesn't believe it. Neither does she.

The least one can hope is that Judge Frank M. Padden has a happy life outside the courtroom. It is his fate to sit in the Domestic Relations and Delinquency court listening to a tale of woe that never ends.

Listens and Sifts Their Tales.

Tears and recriminations, the horrible and petty spites that a man and a woman can vent upon each other, stories of unbelievable brutishness pervade the court with an atmosphere that is almost tangible.

Quiet, firm, always in control, Judge Padden sifts motives and facts, narrows each question to a point in law, and gets to the bottom of each problem. Frequently there is a word in chambers to supplement a judgment from the bench that is confined too much by the cold do-this and do-that of the law.

A child, with an old and knowing face, tells her story. It is a terrible thing. Judge Padden summarizes the facts. Of the defendant he says:

"Under any circumstances his conduct was indefensible. If he had been sober I'd sentence him to a year. Since he was drunk, I'll cut that sentence in half."

He Talks with a Mother.

Then the judge turns toward a woman standing at the bench.

"Are you the mother of this child?" he demands. "Stay around a minute. I'd like to speak to you in chambers."

This next woman is gabby—talk, talk, talk. She is charging her husband with nonsupport. The judge tries to hear the story and no more than the story. He doesn't want a two volume autobiography. But——

"He said. . . . And I did. . . . Your honor, would you believe it?"

"Madam," says the judge testily, "will you keep quiet one minute?"

"And that isn't all, your honor. He —— O, I'm sorry."

"That's all right. You just keep quiet."

Then the judge considers.

Another Marriage Ends.

The order is that the husband pay $10 a week. Yes, he may sue for divorce. But that is a matter for another court.

Picking a cigar from the rail where he had deposited it, the man walks toward the door. The woman, following rapidly, passes him. She wheels just outside the courtroom and waits. He sees her, angrily clamps his cigar in his mouth, and retreats to sanctuary inside the door. He waits until she has gone. There will be no last word this time.

A MASTER TELLS FOUR DOGS WHEN THEY MAY HOWL

Finally Finds a Precedent in a Baffling Case.

Whether they like it or not, four dogs belonging to Mrs. Edith Mae Strassheim, 4227 North Hermitage avenue, will have to learn to bark henceforth only if [1] the house is on fire, [2] there's a burglar prowling about, or [3] somebody annoys them and they don't like it.

This hapless predicament was decided on for the quartet yesterday by Master in Chancery Daniel A. Covelli. He made the ruling in connection with a complaint by Ole Kolseth, 4233 North Hermitage avenue, that Mrs. Strassheim's dogs were a nuisance. The dogs, Kolseth charged, were frolicking continually in the adjoining yard, yelping and keeping the tenants in his building awake all hours of the night.

She Defends Her Pets.

For five weeks, Kolseth, his wife, Mary, and some of their tenants testified to the dogs' bad manners. Mrs. Strassheim defended her pets, charging that the only reason they barked was because Kolseth's janitor had showered them with water from a garden hose several times.

When the time came for a decision, Master Covelli admittedly was stumped. The problem was difficult, he confessed, because Mrs. Strassheim had a property right in her pets and yet the tenants of the Kolseth building were entitled to their rest and sleep.

Finally, after scouring volume after volume filled with legal decisions, he uncovered a ruling made in a similar case in Pennsylvania in 1912. In that case the court ruled that dog owners were obliged to curb "the yelping and barking propensities of their pets except in cases of fire and burglary." [Illinois legal books provided no similar precedent].

He Lays Down the Law.

Armed with this decision, Master Covelli handed down his edict, which now goes to the Superior court for formal approval. Mrs. Strassheim, he ruled, must take care "to train her dogs so that they will not bark except in cases of burglary, fire, or except when they are provoked." He also directed her to keep the dogs in the house until 9 a. m. on wee' days and noon on Sundays and to take them back in not later than 7 p. m.

The four dogs—who had no chance, of course, to testify—were reportedly pretty peeved late yesterday. But it was learned that, being law abiding dogs, they were confining their protests to low growls.

RAILROADS BEAT PACKING PLANT'S SUIT FOR $750,000

A jury in federal District court refused damages yesterday to the Omaha Packing company, which had sued three railroad companies for $750,000 as the result of a fire that destroyed its plant near Halsted street and the south branch of the Chicago river on Aug. 4, 1932.

The packing company charged the Alton railroad, the Pennsylvania railroad, and the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad with negligence in opening their bridge over the river to a fireboat which was going to the blaze. The boat's delay, it was charged, was responsible for the fire's spreading from a nearby elevator to the packing plant. The jury held that the evidence showed no negligence by the railroads.

GIRL'S DETECTING HALTS BURGLARY; ARREST 2 IN ACT

Miss Helen Costello, whose job is to listen to telephone calls in the Central police station at 11th and State streets, turned detective early today. As a result of her reasoning, two burglars were caught in the act of looting a tavern at 1170 Armitage avenue and locked up at the Hudson avenue station.

As Miss Costello listened to a report she had caught only the words "Armitage avenue" when the caller hung up. Miss Costello had received a few minutes earlier a report of an attempted burglary in a tavern at 1758 Clybourn avenue. Although Miss Costello's home is at 1521 West 89th street, she is familiar with the near north side. She reasoned that the second caller was reporting a burglary in the tavern she knew to be at the Armitage avenue address. Acting on this hunch, she caused a police radio broadcaster to direct squads to that address.

Arriving at the tavern, the Hudson avenue squad found three cases of whisky stacked ready for removal, with a radio on top of them. They also found and arrested two burglars, who gave their names and addresses as Michael Zito, 23 years old, 765 Schiller street, and Tony Gianatano, 20, 718 Blackhawk street. Police said Gianatano had served two years in the Illinois Security hospital at Chester.

CAUSE OF BLAST THAT KILLED 60 IN RUMANIA HUNTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 14.—With all the witnesses to it killed, the Rumanian government today sought to learn what caused the triple explosion last night at the nitro-cellulose plant at Zarnesti which killed 60 persons and seriously gassed 170 more. All 56 members of the night force on duty at the plant were killed in the blast.

The disaster, in one of Europe's largest factories, was the eighth unexplained accident in Rumania within six weeks. Officials theorize that one tank of chlorine used for processing exploded and started a fire which exploded two other tanks before the workmen could don gas masks to fight the flames. Clouds of poison gas swept into the village, gassing scores of persons as they slept. Officials of the plant were killed as they raced toward it after hearing the blast.

Official circles doubt the blast was caused by sabotage, but rumors of this are growing since the plant could have helped Germany carry on the war.

TAXPAYERS TOLD TO ROUT CROOKS AND STOP WASTE

Force, Not Logic, Needed, Says Forum Speaker.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Logic and sweet reason are not sufficient to cope with ward politics and bad administration. Force is needed, the force of aroused public opinion expressed thru taxpayers' organizations.

This was the message brought to the Illinois tax forum session yesterday by Norman MacDonald, executive director of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers' Associations.

The forum, which is sponsored by the Illinois Tax commission and has the coöperation of 40 civic and economic organizations, will end its sessions in the Palmer House today. It is possible that some sort of a federation or plan for organization and more meetings will result.

Mentions O'Hare Murder Case.

The underground connection between Chicago and Massachusetts in the Edward J. O'Hare gang murder was mentioned by MacDonald. [O'Hare, a race track operator in Chicago, Boston, and Miami, was slain by shotgun assassins on Nov. 8.]

"The times, and some of the men who dominate the times, constitute a basic challenge to those of us who wish to end our days under the flag of a republic," MacDonald said. "It is the challenge to produce and support good leaders—men of vision and character.

"A federal judge is trapped selling justice and draws a minor sentence—less severe than a hungry man might get for stealing a loaf of bread. Here in Chicago you see murdered one O'Hare, a race track operator, and certain political quarters in Massachusetts are rocked to their foundation. A Pendergast ravages Kansas City for two decades and draws a prison sentence not much longer than that served occasionally by a drunken driver.

"The American people are showing signs that they sense the danger in which they live. They are preparing to develop a new and effective leadership that will restore to their hands the ideals of a government which serves and does not crush them."

Urges People to Act.

MacDonald said the science of public administration must be applied to local problems, declaring that governments are lagging by years and decades in this science. He would apply force in this direction "by great and growing organizations of everyday men and women, outraged at waste and inefficiency, who have risen in bloodless but determined revolution in defense of their homes, their businesses, and their liberties."

"The leadership the people of America need they cannot find except as they may organize to create it," he continued. "In our time and generation we have come upon a great crisis. Whether or not we survive depends on the wisdom and conscience of the people.

"The hot lash of tyranny even today cracks across the backs of men and women in other countries. We will never hear it in America if, and only if as citizens we join together to resist it."

Tax Collections Discussed.

Improvements in property tax methods and problems of tax delinquencies were the subjects of general discussion yesterday. Prof. H. K. Allen of the University of Illinois economics department said that tax collection might be improved greatly by better coördination of fiscal years, budget years, and tax levies.

Cook county is collecting penalties or delinquent taxes at loan shark rates, Lawrence C. Mills, chairman of the committee on delinquent taxes of the Chicago Bar association, told the forum. "Instead of enforcing or settling back taxes," he said, "it has been to the advantage of the county government to let collections drag on. The law should be changed so that the government agency charged with tax collections cannot continue to benefit by mounting delinquencies."

Ronald B. Welch, research director of the National Association of Assessing Officers, spoke in favor of state assessment of public utilities, instead of local levies. At present they are assessed by 1,400 local assessors.

Singer Returns for Encore

The demand of City Opera audiences for a third performance of her "Louise" brought Grace Moore back yesterday from New York. Alighting from the New York Central's Iroquois in the La Salle street station, she gaily described her dash from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera house Wednesday night in full "Manon" make-up and hoop skirts to catch the train that would bring her here for the scheduled rehearsal. She is to sing tomorrow night.

Miss Moore spoke enthusiastically of the singers she has been auditioning during the last several months wherever professional engagements take her. Already she has heard 500, preparatory to opening a singing school near her 300 acre farm in Connecticut in June.

The school is an outgrowth of her conviction that many fine singers are denied a career in music because they are unable to make the necessary contacts with managers. Miss Moore said she was obliged to take the hard way to the opera stage and she was determined to lend young singers a hand.

Chicago Red Cross Sends More Aid to Refugee Poles

The Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross announced last night that 10 more cases of winter clothing and surgical dressings are to be sent abroad today for Polish refugees. This makes the seventh big shipment of its kind. All the articles were made by volunteer workers. Today's shipment includes 1,835 surgical dressings, 232 bed shirts, 80 convalescent robes, 160 pairs of men's socks, 90 men's sweaters, 140 children's sweaters, 70 mufflers, and 54 layettes.

TOMAN SAYS LAW BARS NEW PLAN ON BACK TAXES

County Treasurer John Toman said yesterday that a plan proposed Wednesday by a Chicago Bar association committee to reduce the county's burden of half a billion dollars in delinquent taxes could not be carried out under present state laws.

The committee proposed that property owners who have paid their 1936-'38 taxes in full should receive a waiver of penalties on all their delinquent real estate taxes prior to 1936 and that a single interest item of 6 per cent should be substituted.

Toman said that he and his attorney, Arthur Sullivan, have studied all delinquent tax plans and have found that only the legislature can authorize the reduction of penalties.

BOARD TO RULE ON CITY DAMAGE SUITS SUGGESTED

Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes recommended yesterday that a commission be established to give preliminary rulings on damage suits brought against the city. As members he suggested a physician, a lawyer, and a layman.

"At present a thousand damage suits for a total of $5,000,000 are pending," Hodes said. "Much litigation would be avoided and both the city and the complainants would save money if fair decisions were made by an unprejudiced body. The cases would go to court only if the parties were not satisfied with the rulings."

Hodes made the suggestion in an address to the North Town and Rogers Park Kiwanis clubs.

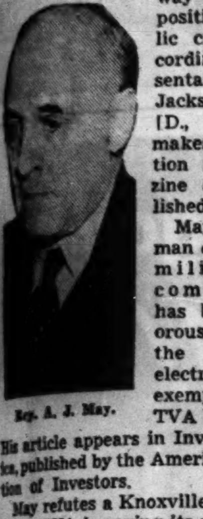
FAKE ACCOUNTING SOURCE OF TVA'S PROFIT, SAYS MAY

Charges System Operates at 15 Million Loss.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Recent statements that the Tennessee Valley authority is paying its way are an imposition on public credulity according to Representative Andrew Jackson May [D., Ky.]. He makes this assertion in a magazine article published yesterday.



Rep. A. J. May.

May is chairman of the house military affairs committee. He has been a vigorous critic of the New Deal electric policy as exemplified in the TVA experiment.

His article appears in Investor America, published by the American Federation of Investors.

May refutes a Knoxville news story saying TVA is paying its way. "This story," May said, "quotes J. A. Krug, TVA chief power engineer, who asserts that power revenues for the current year will cover all power costs, the common costs allotted to power in the construction of multiple purpose dams in the Tennessee river, and, in addition, a reasonable interest rate on government funds."

Charges Trick Bookkeeping.

"TVA's major deceit," continues May, "consists of a bookkeeping charge off to the spurious flood control and navigation for benefit alleged to accrue from construction of the dams. Thus it establishes a rate base of approximately one-half of the actual capital investment.

"By the end of the fiscal year to which Mr. Krug refers, TVA will have seven of its proposed 10 dams in actual power production. The total investment of TVA in these dams will amount to $244,960,769. But the write off to navigation and flood control will reduce to $128,364,245 the capital base on which it must earn income sufficient to meet the interest, depreciation reserve, taxes, and operating expenses upon which it is supposed to predicate its yardstick rates.

Writeoff of Capital.

"A glance at indisputable facts will convince the most skeptical that TVA is guilty of a deliberate writeoff of its capital investment for the purpose of establishing subsidized rates sanctimoniously called 'yardstick' rates.

"Mr. Krug says TVA will earn $15,000,000 this year on the basis of September earnings of $1,250,000. This will be revenue from the sale of power generated by the seven dams that will be in operation, plus dams and steam plants purchased last summer. TVA built dams cost $244,960,769. Transmission lines and substation facilities cost about $16,000,000 more. Add to that the $44,000,000 which TVA paid for the facilities of the Tennessee Electric Power company and the total is $304,960,769.

"A private utility would pay 5 per cent as interest and set up a depreciation reserve averaging 2.5 per cent. This cost would be $22,872,000 annually. The private utilities of the area, prior to TVA, paid taxes averaging 17 per cent of gross revenues. This would amount to $2,500,000. TVA under the law contributes only 5 per cent of its gross revenues.

Puts Loss at 15 Millions.

"Thus under conditions comparable to private operation, fixed charges and taxes would amount to $25,000,000 annually—before TVA spent a cent for maintenance and operation which would amount to another $5,000,000 annually. Instead of paying its way, TVA is short by approximately $15,000,000 of what it should be earning."

The Inquiring Reporter

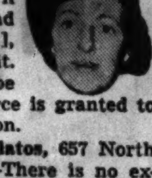
The Question.

Do you think separate maintenance should be paid indefinitely, or should divorce be granted after a fixed period? How long?

Where Answered.

In North avenue.

The Answers.



Mrs. A. M. Wolf, 2157 North avenue, housewife—I think the period of separate maintenance should be limited by law. Many women without children [and some with children], take advantage of it. I think there should be a period before divorce is granted to allow for reconciliation.

Miss Florence Pavlatos, 657 North avenue, sales clerk—There is no excuse for separate maintenance that stretches for years and years. I think two years should be long enough to clarify the situation for husband and wife, and after that, if they cannot get along, a divorce should be granted.

Ingvald Larsen, 1634 North Artesian avenue, hotel clerk—Separate maintenance is the club often used over men. A period should be set by the judge to allow for any adjustments necessary and after that separate maintenance should automatically become divorce. Alimony should be paid where it is necessary.

Ivan Tope, 1503 North La Salle street, waiter—There should be a fixed time to save a man from living all his life tied to a woman who does not want to live with him. Six months should be enough. Separate maintenance is an imposition on men. Divorce seems fair to both.

Charles E. Allderdice, 7208 South Shore drive, chemist—A divorce should be granted within a year. That's plenty of time for both parties to make up their minds, and for any adjustments. Separate maintenance, extended over a long period, is my idea of high grade blackmail.

JURY DIGS INTO ROOTS OF OPEN AND SHUT CASE

Judge Its Witnesses by Their Teeth.

Several days ago there were whisperings in the United States courthouse that witnesses before the federal grand jury were behaving strangely. Veteran court attachés shook their heads. They couldn't remember when the old building had seen anything like it.

One witness, as the story got out, was asked to whistle. He puckered up his lips. The startled jurors saw the upper plate of his false teeth fly across the room.

Recitations and Grimaces.

And that wasn't all. Other witnesses were required to draw back their lips from time to time and show their molars to the jury. At the direction of government prosecutors, it was reported, they moved their jaws rapidly or recited such tongue twisters as:

"Shimmering shells on the sea shore . . ."

It seemed to be an odd business—until yesterday.

Then the grand jury returned indictments charging John Alger and his wife, Josephine, operators of a dental laboratory at 1562 North Wells street, with violating the postal laws in conducting the sale of mail order false teeth.

The Algers did a thriving business in the rural areas, it was charged by A. Bradley Eben, assistant United States attorney, with the aid of a $1,000 a month campaign in which they promised:

"You can laugh with Alger teeth. You can eat corn on the cob. Alger teeth do not ache."

But the jurors decided that the rosy pictures painted by the Algers were too rosy. The teeth didn't live up to advance billing.

Send in Impressions.

Prospective customers received a rubbery compound which they had to heat before sinking their gums into it, the indictment explains. They sent impressions to the laboratory and by mail received their new grinders. The jury found that in most cases the teeth fitted poorly and failed to give satisfaction.

In 1936, the year after the Algers went into business, they had receipts of $33,816.99, the jurors found. They paid out $12,000 of this for magazine advertisments. Federal Judge William H. Holly set bond for husband and wife at $2,500 each.

Thieves Warned: Poison Covers Copper You Stole

This is a warning to the thieves who stole 12 pieces of copper from the Mitchell Manufacturing company, 1160 Howe street, Wednesday night. The copper is covered with a poisonous solution. Any one touching the copper and then putting his hand to his mouth probably would die of poisoning, according to Sam Silberstein, 4942 North Hamlin avenue, the plant manager.

HERE'S A HAM ACT THAT WILL BRING A HOST APPLAUSE

Carving Is Much Simpler than It Sounds.

Bedecked with fruits and cloves and wearing a shiny brown sugar glaze, a whole ham is brought to the table and placed before the host. It's at about this time that the average man feels most keenly the strain of playing the perfect host.

But carving a ham isn't as hard as it looks. With a little practice the ham can be carved with a perfection that does justice to its elaborate garnishings.

Ham is always brought to the table with the fat, trimmed side up. It must be turned on edge, with the thicker edge up, before it can be sliced.

This Is How You Begin.

The first step, then, is to cut a few slices from the thin edge of the ham so that it will stand steadily when turned on the platter during the carving process.

To do this, the carving fork, held in the left hand, is inserted in the left side of the ham. Two or three slices are now cut lengthwise from the thin edge of the ham. Since ham is always placed lengthwise on the platter with the shank bone to the right, the thin edge to be cut will be directly in front of the carver if the leg is a left one and directly opposite if it is a right leg.

Next, the ham is turned on edge so that it rests on the cut surface, with the shank bone pointing upward. The turning is accomplished with the carving fork. Still holding the ham steady with the fork, the carver cuts a wedge shaped piece from the shank end. The wedge is cut by slicing straight down to the bone at a point about 6 inches from the end of the shank, and then moving the knife to the right and making a cut at an angle which meets the first cut at the bone.

Now You Start Slicing.

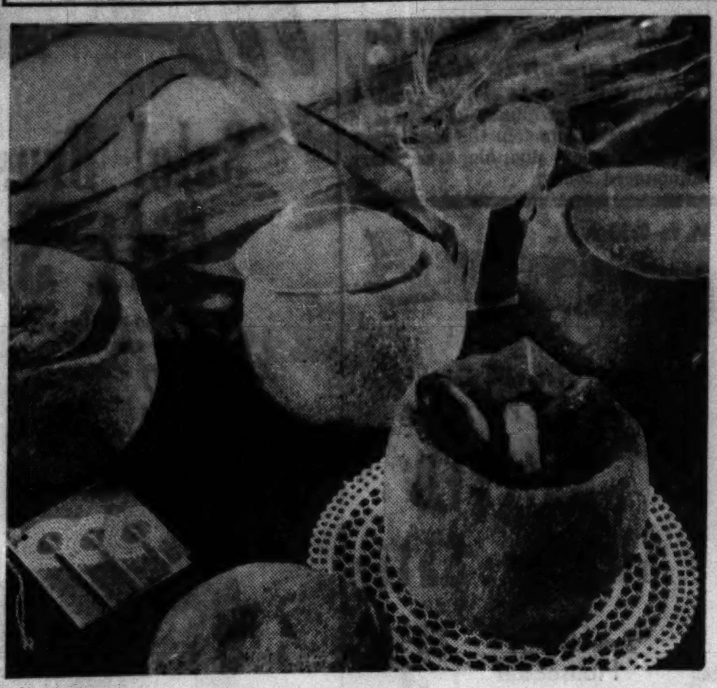
The carver now proceeds to slice the ham, cutting thin parallel slices down to the leg bone. He slices from right to left until stopped by the aitch bone in the thick end of the ham. Each stroke of the knife should be drawn to the full length of the blade, without a sawing motion.

The slices are freed from the bone by running the knife along the bone and at right angles to the slices. It is to simplify this last step that the wedge shaped piece is cut before slicing is begun.

If more servings are needed, the ham is turned back to its original position on the platter and slices are cut at right angles to the bone.

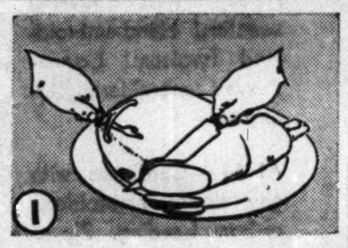
If all this seems complicated, there is consolation in knowing that the firmness of its flesh makes ham easier to slice than most other meats.

Containers for Gift Candies

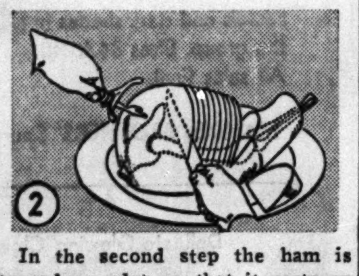


Attractive containers for gift candies are candied grapefruit shells. They are prepared by removing fruit and cooking in salted water for 10 minutes. Cook in several waters until bitter flavor is removed. Cool and cook in a sirup made of equal parts of sugar and water. Cook to a medium thick sirup (220 degrees) and let fruit stand in sirup overnight. Turn several times. Cook to very thick sirup. Drain and cool and roll in granulated sugar. If desired, one tablespoon of sherry may be added to the sirup for each cup of water used.

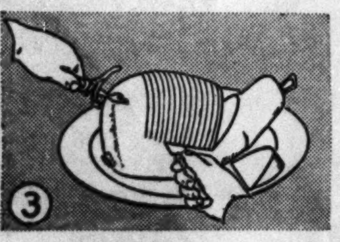
Carving a Ham



Only three steps are involved in carving a whole baked ham. First, two or three slices are cut length wise from the thinnest side of the ham.



In the second step the ham is turned on edge so that it rests on the cut surface. Thin, parallel slices are cut down to the leg bone after a wedge-shaped piece has been cut from the shank end.



The third and final step consists of sliding a knife along the leg bone to loosen the slices.

Cinnamon Candy Jelly Is Seasonal Aid to Meat

No meat accompaniment could be more appropriate to the season than cinnamon candy jelly. You'll like the taste of it with your Christmas turkey or chicken.

CINNAMON CANDY JELLY.

5½ cups sugar
3 cups water
½ pound red cinnamon candies
1 bottle liquid pectin

Measure sugar and water into a large saucepan and stir. Add cinnamon drops and bring to a boil over high heat. Add liquid pectin, stirring constantly. Bring to full rolling boil and boil hard for ½ minute. Remove from heat, skim and pour quickly into sterilized glasses. Seal with paraffin at once.

ITEMS THAT WILL TAKE THE CAKE AT YOUR TEA PARTY

Snowball Cookies and Special Delicacies.

Don't wait for signs of snow to make these frosty-looking Snowball Cookies, for they're good in any season. Of course the tea table will be especially attractive during the holidays if it's laden with these tempting delicacies.

SNOWBALL COOKIES.
[6 dozen.]

¼ cup evaporated milk
¾ cup butter
½ teaspoon vanilla
1¾ cups sifted flour
6 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
1 cup pecans, coarsely chopped

Beat evaporated milk, a little at a time, into the well creamed butter. Then add flavoring and sifted flour, which has been resifted with the confectioners' sugar. Add the flour in small portions; then add the chopped pecans. Roll into tiny balls, using about 1 teaspoon dough for each ball. Bake on floured sheet in a hot [400 degrees] oven until golden brown, about 15 minutes. Roll cookies in confectioners' sugar while still warm.

SPICED TEA CAKES
[2 dozen small cakes]

½ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs, beaten
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon allspice
¾ cup milk

Cream shortening and sugar together until light and fluffy. Add beaten eggs and mix well. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and spices together and add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Bake in greased muffin pans in moderately hot oven [375 degrees] for 20 to 25 minutes.

FLUFFY WHITE FROSTING.

1 cup sugar
1 egg white
2 tablespoons light corn sirup
3 tablespoons water
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon flavoring extract

Combine all ingredients except flavoring in top of double boiler. Cook over rapidly boiling water, beating constantly with rotary beater until mixture holds its shape. Remove from heat. Beat until cool. Add flavoring and spread on cup cakes. Decorate tops with candied cherries, citron, and orange peel.

LET RED COLORED DESSERTS BRING CHEER TO TABLE

Two Recipes for Light End to Christmas Meal.

If you're one who is content to let gay, red colored foods bring the spirit of Christmas to your table in place of heavier traditional foods, you'll like these two dessert recipes. Both will bring a light ending to a heavy meal. You will need a spring form pan to make them.

CRANBERRY REFRIGERATOR CAKE.

1 pound cranberries
1⅓ cups water
3 eggs, separated
2 cups sugar
5 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Juice and rind of ½ orange
1 tablespoon butter
1 dozen lady fingers

Cook cranberries and water together until berries pop open. Strain through coarse sieve, pushing as much of the pulp through as possible. Combine with well beaten egg yolks, sugar, flour, salt, orange juice, and rind. Cook over hot water until thickened. Add butter. Cool and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Line bottom and sides of a spring form pan with lady fingers. Pour in cranberry mixture in thirds, placing a layer of lady fingers between layers of cranberry mixture. Chill for eight hours or until firm. Unmold and garnish with chopped pistachio nuts.

CHERRY TORTE.

6 eggs, separated
2 cups confectioners' sugar, sifted
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Grated rind of 1 lemon
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 cup fine, dry bread crumbs
2 cups drained, canned sour cherries
¾ cup chopped almonds
Whipped cream

Beat egg yolks until light, add sugar, and beat until thick and lemon colored. Add cinnamon, lemon rind, and juice. Fold in bread crumbs and stiffly beaten egg whites. Then fold in cherries and almonds. Pour into a large, well greased spring form pan. Sprinkle with more confectioners' sugar and chopped almonds and bake in a slow [325 degrees] oven for about one hour. Cool, remove from pan, and serve with whipped cream. Garnish each serving with halved maraschino cherries and bits of candied citron if desired.

CHERRIES LEND ATMOSPHERE TO YULETIDE CANDY

Come the holidays, and any candy has a Christmaslike appearance. Christmas candies aren't after all, much different from other homemade candies, altho of course, there may be a few more stuffed, dried fruits than usual, and certainly there should be a greater variety.

You can put a Christmas greeting on your favorite divinity by adding chopped maraschino cherries to the mixture. Tiny Christmas wreaths, studded with bits of candied cherry for holly and chopped pistachios for green leaves, can be cut or shaped from fondant. Fondant patties tinted red and green add a colorful Christmas note to the candy bowl or box.

Instead of the usual nut cups, serve your Christmas candies in candied orange cups. These are made as you would make the candied sliced peel, except that the whole orange shell is used. Whole candied grapefruit makes a pretty gift container for candies and nutmeats.

BOOKLETS EASE JOB OF MAKING YULE DELICACIES

The trimming of the tree, the gay shopping crowds, and the wrapping of presents all have their share in making the Christmas season what it is. As important as any of them is the appetizing odors that emanate from the kitchen almost any day the last couple of weeks in December.

It's the tempting sniff of cookies baking, candy in the making, and puddings steaming for the Christmas dinner.

The work calls for much time and trouble on somebody's part, and it's the clever homemaker who arms herself ahead of time with plenty of recipe and menu ideas.

And that's where Mary Meade's booklets come in. She has one to meet your every holiday cooking need. Some you will find especially helpful at this season are:

"Holidays and Holiday Meals" [price, 20 cents; by mail, 23 cents] for dinner and party menu suggestions and recipes: "Holiday Cookies and Fruit Cakes," for making all the famous old-fashioned cakes and cookies; "Simple Homemade Candies," for a variety of sweetmeats, and "Better Homemade Breads and Rolls," for fancy breads to serve from breakfast to dinner all the way through the holidays.

For a gift for your homemaking friends, consider the special holiday offering of Mary Meade's five large printed booklets at $1.05, by mail. Booklets in the combination are "Modern Meat Lore," "Baking the Perfect Cake," "Mary Meade's Best Jams and Jellies," "Holidays and Holiday Meals," and "Better Homemade Breads and Rolls." These booklets sell separately for 23 cents each, by mail.

If you're one of the many women who has made fruit cakes for gifts from one of Mary Meade's recipes, why not enclose a gift copy of Mary Meade's "Holiday Fruit Cakes and Cookies" with the cake?

BY MARY MEADE.

Do your Christmas grocery shopping early.

It's not too soon to put in your order for turkey, if that's what you've decided to serve. And groceries have tempting displays of many other items that you can buy now to save precious minutes in that last busy week-end.

Steamed puddings as suet-rich and thick with fruit as any you'd make in your own kitchen are now available in cans. You'll not have much trouble finding plum, fig, and date-nut steamed puddings in the grocery stores. Served hot with a sherry or brandy hard sauce these puddings are hard to beat.

Mincemeat Comes in Jars.

Mincemeat, you can get it with a brandy flavoring, comes in jars or in packages. The packaged variety is cheaper, but needs to be cooked with a little water a few minutes before it is put into the pie, cookies, or cored apples.

Holiday dinner items, sweet potatoes and cranberry sauce, also come in cans. Canned sweets may be bought dry-packed or wet-packed. The sweets are whole and peeled and are delicious when reheated in the oven with brown sugar and butter. Or if you buy the dry-pack, try basting with maple sirup during the baking period.

Blessings to Shoppers.

All the staples, from flour to salad dressing, can be bought this week-end for holiday consumption. And don't forget all those whole-meal-in-a-can foods that bring blessings to a weary shopper.

Between shopping trips and cookie baking sessions there will still be lunches and dinners to prepare this coming week. And there are plenty of week-end bargains in foods for them.

Meat for your Sunday dinner might be a pork loin roast. Pork is still the cheapest meat on the market. Leg of lamb and beef steaks from the loin are two other good Sunday dinner bets. For run of the week meals there are beef chuck roast, lamb shoulder roasts, chops, smoked butts, sausage meat, and round steaks available at reasonable prices.

Fruit Prices Little Changed.

Expect little change in fruit and vegetable prices this week-end. Bunch carrots and cauliflower are noticeably cheaper and both are good buys. Iceberg lettuce has reached bottom prices and most heads coming in to Chicago could be labeled fancy grade without stretching points.

Only vegetables higher this week are yellow onions, hot-house tomatoes, and green beans, but the price change is almost too small to mention. New cabbage is moderately priced but somewhat higher than old cabbage.

Fruit prices haven't flickered a penny. Citrus fruits are all very reasonable this year and they have just about reached peak quality. First California avocadoes are now arriving in quantity. They're more expensive than those coming from Florida, but the Florida season is winding up and quality is somewhat substandard.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: So Far—So Good

THIS BOWL OF PUNCH WILL MAKE YULETIDE PARTY BIG SUCCESS

Any open house party is bound to be a gala occasion when guests gather around the punch bowl to sip this zestful holiday punch. And they won't be satisfied with just a glassful, once they've tasted the flavorsome combination of pineapple juice, cider, raisins, and spicy red apple slices, served piping hot from the bowl.

HOLIDAY PUNCH.
[18 Small Glasses.]

4 cups canned unsweetened pineapple juice
4 cups cider
½ cup seeded raisins
2 medium size apples
Cloves
1 stick cinnamon
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
Red vegetable coloring
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Combine pineapple juice and cider, pour over raisins and let stand while apples are being prepared. Peel apples, quarter and remove core. Stick each quarter with three cloves. Combine sugar and water and enough red coloring to make the mixture a deep rose. Add stick cinnamon, bring to a boil and boil for five minutes. Add apples and cook until they are tender but still hold their shape. Bring cider, pineapple juice, and raisins to a boil; add apples and sirup. Stir well. Serve hot in punch glasses with a few raisins and piece of apple in each glass.

WREATH SALAD NICE DECORATION AND TASTY DISH

There's no mistaking the effect this Christmas Wreath Salad will have in decorating the holiday dinner table. It's attractive and delicious.

[Serves Six.]

2 cups cubed cooked beets
½ cup diced celery
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1-3 teaspoon salt
¼ cup granulated sugar
½ cup vinegar
2 cups boiling water or beet juice
2 tablespoons plain, unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water

Simmer 3 minutes the salt, sugar, vinegar and boiling water, pour over gelatin which has been soaked 5 minutes in the cold water. Mix thoroly. Cool and add other ingredients. Pour into ring mold and chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce. Fill with salad dressing and garnish with cream cheese mixed with chopped green peppers.

Ingenious Uses Listed for Pieces of Dried Bread

Dried bread can be used ingeniously as a dainty accompaniment to a custard or light pudding. Dip narrow strips of the bread into condensed milk; roll each strip in shredded coconut and brown lightly in a moderately hot oven [375 degrees]. When serving salad or soup, roll large cubes of dried bread in one beaten egg with two tablespoons melted butter added; roll in grated cheese seasoned with salt and a sprinkling of cayenne. Heat in moderately hot oven until browned.

New Lounging Robes Flatter Silver Haired

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Not all the romantic house coats and tea gowns in brilliant color are for the young collectors. Some of the loveliest new finds have been designed for the sophisticates and the many shoppers with gray or silver coiffures.

One shade is especially flattering with silver hair. It's the sparkling Burgundy red in velvet, soft wool and crêpe.

Graciously beautiful tea gowns in velvet with frosting of either silver or gold embroidery, some with exquisite bands of gray fur, and others with cut out appliques decorating collar, cuffs or belt are exceptional gift finds. So are the clinging crêpes with top boleros of matching Burgundy red marabou.

Another shade is a subtle Dresden blue, deep enough to accent deep blue eyes or contrast brown or gray eyes with the added glory of silver hair. Hostess gowns, padded robes, tea gowns, negligees with lace frills, all come in this flattering deep blue.

Simple tailored robes of warm flannel flash with silver or gold buttons. More dress parade coats with long fitted sleeves and shirred front fullness have gold embroidery on wide belt, cuffs and collar lines. And the many padded house coats come in deep blue velvet, in gleaming satins or softer silks. All shades and models are easily matched with mules or swanky new lounging sandals with wedge soles.

Another shade that is new and especially effective with silver or graying hair is a subtle flatterer called hydrangea pink. Every one can wear this delicate tint, and it is featured not only in fine lingerie, but in robes and hostess gowns.

Lingerie pieces in the new and fragile shades are particularly effective when worn with either the Burgundy red or the Dresden blue house coat robes and hostess gowns. Even the trimming on these gowns is the same perfectly matched and dyed lace.

The wedding will take place in February.

According to CULBERTSON

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

The habit of 99 out of 100 declarers is to make a mad dash to cash, or at least establish, their longest suit. Altho this policy usually is logical, and certainly human, it is by no means invariably correct. Sometimes the "longest suit" can be played in different ways, depending on whether declarer can afford a safety play, or must take a chance on bringing home the entire suit without loss. To discover which plan to use, it often is vital to conduct a preliminary investigation of another suit. This applies specifically to a deal such as the following:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Rubber bridge.

NORTH

♥ J 10 7
♦ A Q 3 2
♣ A 6 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	4 no trump	Pass
5 no trump	Pass	6 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

West selected the club ten as the safest opening lead available. Declarer won in his own hand and, noting that the fate of the contract depended on bringing home the spade suit for at least four tricks, took no account of other factors, but immediately led a spade to the king and returned a spade toward his own hand. When East showed out, the fat was in the fire. There now was no means of holding West to one spade trick, and even tho the diamond king lay in a finessable position, declarer could not snare twelve tricks. South muttered darkly about the horrible break in the spade suit, and North, a kindly [or, perhaps, merely inexpert] soul, clucked sympathetically.

Admitting that the spades did not break well, the fact remains that declarer had played this hand amateurishly. Upon winning the first club lead, he should have analyzed as follows: If the diamond king were right, there were in sight eight tricks outside of the spade suit. Sooner or later, the diamond finesse would have to be taken, if only to dispose of South's losing club. Well, then, why not take the finesse immediately and find out for certain where the king was? If it was offside, and East took a trick with it, then obviously declarer could not afford to lose another trick and would have to play the spade suit wide open, according to the best percentage, to make all five spade tricks. If, however, the diamond finesse succeeded, declarer then could use a safety play to bring home only four spade tricks. Let us see how this works out:

Declarer, after winning with the club king, immediately tries out the diamonds by leading the jack. West probably will not cover the first lead, but when the ten is led, will cover. The ace wins, and now declarer can count three top diamond tricks. On that basis, he now does not even try to make all five of his spades, because he can well afford to make only four of them. A safety play is available which assures him of these four unless one defender has all the missing spades. That safety play is to lead the five spot to the ace and then to play a low spade back toward dummy. If West follows low, dummy's nine is put in. If East can win this trick, it is all right with declarer, since the spade suit is then bound to break. If East does not follow, the nine spot will hold and West is held to one trick.

If, on the low spade lead toward the K-9, West splits his honors, dummy, of course, wins and the nine spot is returned, knocking out West's remaining honor, declarer then taking the balance of the spades.

If, on the lead of the low spade toward the K-9, West shows out, and it is thereby discovered that East started with the Q-10-x-x, dummy's king is put up, and the nine is led back toward the jack. In this case, also, East can make only the queen, since the jack will lie over the ten.

Good Brushing Is the Secret of Hair Beauty

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.
[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

There is a certain young woman who happens to have been under our close observation for the last couple of years, and thru her we have seen a virtual miracle in hair beauty development.

When she first came to our notice, she did have the ugliest, greasiest, stringiest head of hair imaginable. Her skin, at the time, too, was in an acne condition. It was the latter that led her into the hands of a conscientious specialist. The latter's treatments were out of this young worker's budget, but she did what she was told and this young woman proves to us what we have been preaching for years, that any girl or woman who longs for a lovely head of hair can have it, unless there is something so constitutionally wrong with her that she should be under medical care.

There is actually a wave, a large, loose, lovely wave in our young woman's hair now, and it has that look of vitality and health that only a gloss achieved by brushing, brushing, brushing gives. Yes, brushing is the secret. That's what the girl has done—but, Oh, how faithfully. And, believe it or not, both she and her original hair specialist adviser credit this scalp stimulation with a large share in the improved complexion.

It is a theory, and a sound one, that is being worked on now—what's good for the scalp health and beauty is good for the complexion. Not vice-versa, however, to the same noticeable extent because you see skins that are beautifully kept and tended and cared for in company with hair that hasn't anything like the same fine health simply because all the attention was given to the skin.

Then, we happened to be discussing hair with that lovely young wife of Lauritz Melchior, Metropolitan opera star, whose hair is one of her loveliest features, and she proved to be an ardent brushing fan. She brushes with a hard, stiff bristled brush, brushing the "wrong way," meaning up instead of down which, in fact, is the right way. Without this confirmed friend in need, the hairbrush, Mrs. Melchior couldn't keep up with the problems that her extensive traveling introduces, she says.

"Different climates and different temperatures, yet the scalp oils must be kept alive and vigorous whether in New York or California. What better performer than the good brush constantly in use with the hair, whenever possible letting fresh air be the agent for drying."

Bright colored embroidery on the hip pockets and smart flares to skirt and jacket make this white skating suit a stunning costume. The material is a novelty cloth of mixed velvet and duvetyn. Mittens, scarf, and slippers sport gay yarn designs. Embroidery decorates the white cap.

Is Hitler Married?

Has Eva Helen Braun been Hitler's wife for months? She has moved into his Chancellery on Wilhelmstrasse. Read this week's Saturday Evening Post.

Thru the LOOKING GLASS

There are some perfectly stunning bath ensembles, very inexpensive, that have appeal for either men or women. Their scent is sandalwood, their packaging and design enchantingly nautical.

One set is a trio package, smartly boxed. In the center is a bottle of cologne wih a small sea anchor hung round the neck and a wooden stopper topped with a sea compass. On either side of this dashing bottle are fat round cakes of pure white soap shaped on the outer edge like life savers. All would-be seafarers, masculine or feminine, go for this, and it's the kind of gift that is easy on your pocketbook.

Another of these marine sets is composed of dusting powder, cologne and bath oil. The dusting powder top is an authentic wood and brass fitted pilot wheel. Cologne and bath oil bottles are designed like port and starboard running lamps with brass fittings, one red and one green, of course.

The sea chest, in this same series, is most impressive. There are sea salts in a sailcloth duffle bag, bath oil, cologne and six cakes of soap. All too nautical for words. This, too, is surprisingly inexpensive.

The house that offers these has an equestrian line, a special for the gentlemen, that's marvelous for the baffled woman shopper. Boxes are saddle brown; shaving bowls of brilliant chrome with matching chrome topped bottles from which are suspended miniature chrome and leather stirrups. The bowls, after shave lotion, shaving cream, hair dressing and talc, come grouped in various fashions and at varying prices. These, too, well styled as they are and of excellent quality, are astonishingly inexpensive.

Smart Costume Is a Good Gift for the Skater

Amateur or professional, all skaters enjoy the eye appeal of good costumes. Whether you like vivid color, dull black, or the glamor stuff in all white, the current showings of decorative ensembles will tempt you. And nothing beats these smart costumes for gift appreciation.

Quilted plaid cotton short skirts, whirling dervish short skirts lined with a bright color, plaited wool Scotch plaids and fancy woolens and gabardines . . . all these are out for the shoppers. Rib-hugging short jackets, velvet jackets, quilted jackets, and even gaudy printed cotton prints, padded and quilted, together with sweater units, offer some of the more festive and necessary tops for these skirts.

Skating outfits combining color and contrast are achieved with such separately sold skirts and jackets and the matching accessories of cap, socks, mittens and scarf.

Dress parade outfits feature dress or ensembles of suit and undersweater. Most of these are of white wool, novelty weaves of wool, corduroy, or jersey.

Men Will Run Theater Benefit for Settlement

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE women's boards of Northwestern University settlement often give benefits, but it is seldom that the men's board undertakes to raise money in such a way. This winter, however, the men, headed by Donald P. Welles, who is president of the settlement, are taking over the entire Grand Opera house for Tuesday, Jan. 9, the second night of Robert E. Sherwood's play "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

Raymond Massey plays Lincoln in this play, a prize winning one and ranked by some experts as one of the outstanding plays of the last decade. It seems particularly appropriate that men should sponsor such a play, for it is exactly the sort that men like. No wife will have to drag her spouse to the Grand Opera house on Jan. 9, pleading that it is for sweet charity's sake and that she is sure he will like the performance. Instead, the husbands who have heard about the benefit are saying, "This is something I want to go to."

Women's Committee Will Help Them.

Just because they are planning the affair does not mean that the men are not asking the coöperation and help of the women interested in the settlement, for a large feminine committee has been formed to assist in various ways.

This committee includes Mrs. John I. Hooker, Mrs. James R. Offield, Mrs. Welles, Mrs. Norman J. Westerhold, Mrs. Louis Leverone, Mrs. Robert Pierson, Mrs. Robert L. Scott Jr., Mrs. Paul G. Ware, Mrs. Edward D. St. John, Mrs. Albert C. Levis, Mrs. Francis M. Knight, Mrs. A. W. Jenkinson, Mrs. Charles M. Hickman, Mrs. William H. Barnes, and Mrs. Donald Defrees.

Tickets are on sale in room 1691 Board of Trade building, telephone Wabash 9556. The theater is being divided into boxes, 73 on the main floor and 30 in the balcony. The rest of the seats will be sold singly. Prices will range from $70 for a box seating eight to $3 for a single seat. The settlement for which the benefit is being given is among the oldest and best known in the city. Miss Harriet E. Vittum is the director.

Goes to Detroit for Mother's 79th Birthday.

Mrs. George A. Kelly and her daughters, Mrs. John L. Irving and Miss Kay Kelly, are spending today in Detroit with Mrs. Kelly's mother, Mrs. Henry Forsythe, who is celebrating her 79th birthday today.

The Kellys will return tomorrow morning to be here for a luncheon Miss Kay is giving in the Polo room of the Ambassador hotel tomorrow for Miss Ann Liddle and Thomas Walsh Jr., who are to be married on Jan. 13. The guests will be those who have been at Sun Valley with the Misses Kelly and Liddle, both of whom are devotees of skiing.

Betty Bennett, who returns from the Fermata school on Sunday, and Ruth Ann Bennett, who arrives next Thursday from the Madeira school, will take part in the gay subdebutante whirl during the Christmas season. Their parents, the James E. Bennetts, will give a small party for each of the girls.

Betty's is to be a dinner before the Princeton Triangle club show on the 28th. Ruth Ann's will be a supper and hockey party on Jan. 4. The Bennetts have a debutante daughter, Miss Barbara, who will arrive from Sarah Lawrence next Thursday. That night she will make her debut at a dinner-dance at the Casino.

Prenuptial Parties for Laura Moyer.

Most of the prenuptial parties for Miss Laura Moyer and Arthur Burrows Jr., who are to be married on Dec. 28, have been planned for the week of the wedding, because Mr. Burrows will not arrive from New Haven before next Thursday. In the meantime Mrs. Alexander Revell Jr. will give a luncheon for Miss Moyer at her home tomorrow. Miss Eileen Lindley will have a luncheon at the Woman's Athletic club on Monday.

Miss Moyer and Mr. Burrows will be especial guests at a dinner and theater party which Mrs. John

Masks for Junior League Play

The First Alice Will Be Guest at League Play

BY ELEANOR PAGE.

Miss Sarah Hinde, who was the Alice in the first Chicago Junior league play, "Alice in Wonderland," will be in the audience at the Historical society tomorrow afternoon when the league presents this season's production of the ever popular play. Another member of that cast of 1921 who also will be present is Miss Alice Gerstenberg.

It was Miss Gerstenberg's dramatic version of "Alice" that was given when the Children's theater department was founded 19 years ago. Her play already had been a success, first in Chicago, and then in New York, where Vivian Tobin played the leading role. The music was familiar to all in Chicago, having been written by Eric Delamarter and performed by the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The ambitious theater department started to make a movie of the play, but was unable to get the rights and the production was halted half way thru. The films have remained in some member's vault in a bank and as soon as they are located Miss Hinde will embark on the hilarious but difficult task of editing them.

Mrs. John A. Kovas, present head of the department, is anxious to have color films taken of this year's show and then to run the two films for the entertainment of the whole league.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

Holiday Oddentia.

Most perspiring Christmas shopper of the week was the portly gentleman who tried on the Maximilian suit of armor in the Hearst collection at Field's. It didn't fit, so he didn't buy it. Why did he want it to fit? . . . As part of its Christmas window display one State street store has an animated tableau of a holdup in a western saloon! . . . Probably the oldest glass Christmas tree balls in annual use are those Mrs. Marguerite Wolf unpacked the other day. Heavy glass balls, gold, green, and red, they are at least 65 years old and were given her by her mother-in-law who, in turn, had received them from her mother-in-law.

In the Morning Mail.

Dear Miss Provines: Just to add to general information—the Journal of the American Medical Association in a recent issue gives a mention to a new book called "Getting Ready to Be a Father," by Hazel Corbin, general director, Maternity Center association, New York.

Quoting the Journal: "Written in narrative form . . . among other things it describes choice of doctor, hospital . . . tells what to do about grandmothers, grandfathers, diapers . . . how to build a crib at home."

And in a final analysis the critic says: "The kind of men who need this book will never buy it!"

Jack Garber.

Overheard:

(By Florence Wallace from two young men leaving the stock show.)

Second Graders' Sale.

One of the subjects taught in the Girls' Latin school, where the daughters of some of Chicago's financially elect are taught, is How to Handle Money. Harry M. Coleman visited the school the other day and the following sign, neatly lettered by second graders who are taking the course, caught his eye:

BIG SALE.

Chocolate Bars, 20c.	Books, 50c
Erasers, 15c	Paint Brush, 5c
Stamps, 5c	Crayon, 1c

We can offer no more information. It stuck in Mr. Coleman's mind, and we keep pondering over it, too.

Many Parties Will Follow Concert Today

There never is a dearth of places to go for tea following the Friday concerts of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, but this afternoon brings a new high in after the concert teas.

In addition to the usual parties at the Cliff Dwellers', the Cordon, and the College club there are an Opera Foundation tea and at least two other parties. One of these is the reception Mrs. Albert F. Madlener and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Albert F. Madlener Jr., are giving for another daughter-in-law, Mrs. Otto Madlener, who came here as a bride last fall. She is the former Miss Elaine Wetmore of New York.

The senior Mrs. Madlener has asked her sisters, Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, Mrs. William Sherman Hay, and Mrs. Otto Z. Schmidt, and several nieces to assist. Mrs. Madlener Jr.'s sister, Mrs. Phillip Miller, also will be among the assistants.

The other gay tea party is one Mrs. William E. Vogelback will give in her apartment at 222 East Delaware place. Among Mrs. Vogelback's guests will be Abbé Ernest Dimnet, lecturer and author, who is visiting the Max Epsteins at the Drake hotel, and who has made many friends here.

Mrs. Walter R. Kirk will open her home at 1500 Lake Shore drive for a meeting of the woman's committee of the Opera Foundation fund. Further sums that have been raised to assure Chicago of future seasons of grand opera will be announced. The guests will meet four singers, Grace Moore, Marion Claire, Rosa Raisa, and Edith Mason.

Mrs. Edwin S. Fetcher will be the hostess for the Cliff Dwellers today. Assisting her will be Mrs. Ernst C. Von Ammon, Mrs. Robert O. Butz, Mrs. George B. Foster, and Mrs. John E. Love.

Albert Cotsworth will be the Cordon's especial guest today. Miss Emily Ortner, contralto from Vienna, accompanied by Dr. Hans Schnitzler, will give a musical program.

Looking at Hollywood by Ed Sullivan

Vox Populi.

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 14.—Dear Ed: You've often written about young Tyrone Power and what a swell person you believed him to be. I am a convict, so don't use my name in this, but here are the facts. In 1914 I loaned Tyrone Power Sr. $200. In the meantime I went to France and when I returned I'd lost sight of Tyrone Sr. and didn't know he had a son.

This last spring, just after I was sentenced to this penitentiary, I read an article in your column about the boy, what a fine character he was, so in desperation I wrote him asking if he would assume the obligation of his dad.

Back came a letter from his counsel, asking for dates, etc., and immediately I got a check for the full amount. The point is that this kid, unknown to me personally, came thru when people I knew personally and who owed me money left my letters unanswered.—Sincerely, M. S., Huntsville, Tex.

Dear Ed: Received contracts today from Vinton Freedley on Erskine Hawkins' job in the Burgess Meredith show, "Young Man with a Horn." Erskine, thanks to you for going to bat for the youngster, has an important part. It was just the break he needed to push himself over the top and you've made his Christmas the merriest he's ever enjoyed.—Al Wilde.

My Dear Editors: Ed Sullivan looks and listens with too much awe to the movie stars. He does not say enough about the sweat, the hours of sheer hard labor, the human weaknesses, the vanities, diseases, envies, jealousies, and all the other normal qualities of life that contribute to the artistic personalities of the famous movie stars. Sullivan ought to stop his overreligious, esthetically hysterical writing and apply a goodly amount of common sense to his job.—Leon Arnold Muller.

Dear Mr. Sullivan: I've been delegated by the city of Prairie du Chien and the state of Wisconsin to petition your help in securing the world première of "Northwest Passage" for this city. We feel that we have the only rightful claim to the première of this picture, because forty pages of the book refer to Prairie du Chien, the searching party actually spending two winters here.—James S. O'Neill, President, Crawford County Teachers.

Dear Ed: Your columnistic comments on Ann Rutherford were delightful reading to all of us who met this ebullient little lady on her eastern trip. Every one was impressed with the charming intelligence and enthusiasm she displayed at every turn.

Whether she was in the company of national lawmakers on Capitol hill or with the D. C. drama critics she was there always with the right answer.—Sincerely, Carter Barron, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Sullivan: You are one of the few writers in Hollywood who devotes, from time to time, an item to the former stars now playing smaller rôles, such as your mention about George Brent remembering the widow of John Harron. So I'd like to salute some of yesteryear's stars I've seen playing small rôles in the last three months, but who just a few years ago transported me on wings of adventure and romance to soaring heights.

Frank Mayo played opposite seductive Corinne Griffith. Paul Panzer and Robert Frazier were favorite leads. The name of Barbara Bedford blazed from marquees. Jack Mower was the De Mille hero, and Kenneth Harlan made the ladies swoon. Betty Blythe played the Queen of Sheba to Fritz Leiber's Solomon. William Farnum was Fox's fair haired boy.

Herbert Rawlinson was the William Powell of his day, and Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers were one of the great screen teams. Antonio Moreno was the great lover, and Monte Blue was a fine light comedian. Jack Mulhall was in the Top Ten. To all of them—Stuart Holmes, Florence Billings, Francis Ford, Grace Cunard, Gertrude Astor, Helen McKeller, Wilfred Lucas, Mitchell Lewis, Warner Richmond, Harold Goodwin, Donald Dilloway, George Hackathorne, Huntley Gordon, Wyndham Standing—a deep bow and may 1940 bring them a new lease on film life.—Chet Swital.

Dear Ed: In re your item about Della Lind getting her citizenship papers after Jan. 1, it will interest you to know that the hard luck which has trailed her persistently has finally let up. Finally she is headed for stardom. Her citizenship papers evidently brought her luck. Regards.—Dave Quirk.

Dear Mr. Sullivan: I do not expect much of this letter. Last night I saw the new moon over my left shoulder and today this typewriter is dropping letters below the horizon. Nevertheless, I arise to ask why the h—— you never mention George Brent as a candidate for an academy Oscar. See that justice is done, and you are of the stuff of which Galahads are fashioned. Don't do it and you are 18 kinds of a stinker, and well you know it. Sincerely.—Madeline McSweeney [120 Wall street].

The Housewife

If you're looking for clever little inexpensive Christmas remembrances here are two. The first is a set of colored plastic picks like small two-tined forks, for spearing the olive out of a Martini cocktail or the cherry from an old-fashioned.

The second item is a set of cocktail napkins in bright red or blue that are decorated with the signs of the zodiak and that have bits of astrological lore printed on them.

Obey the Laws of Nature with Your Children

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

An inventor of machinery, electrical devices, or explosives doesn't say, "I'm going to handle this material the way I please," because he knows if he does he'll meet with failure or disaster. He obeys the law governing the stuff he handles. He works with those laws, not against them. And he has to know what those laws are in order to work with them.

There's the great secret of working with children, of guiding them to their great happiness and fulfillment. That key to success is: Work with the natural ways of childhood. Watch, think, care, and see what the laws of childhood are. Then work with those laws, not against them. In no other way lies success.

Now, you may have learned what is natural to childhood by intuition. "Children just are that way and you have to handle them accordingly," may be your philosophy. "She has a way with children," some one else may say of you when they see the freedom and satisfaction of your children. But if you don't happen to be intuitive you can get a great deal by thinking and observing.

Parents who are going to be successful with their children must recognize that their children have their own natural ways of being and doing, and that they must work with them to secure them peace and satisfaction.

For instance, if your little son or daughter is utterly absorbed in some fascinating play it would be unnatural for him to drop it and run to you the instant you call him.

There are great forces at work when he is lost to the world in this way. If he must be taken from such play it shouldn't be sharply, abruptly done. To expect instant obedience at such a time would be working against the laws of his nature.

What is he showing in such play? Absorption, inner enthusiasm, concentration, intense interest, a shutting out of everything for the time—all valuable powers and experiences that should not be disturbed rudely. If he must leave this play, and he often must to eat, sleep, or bathe, give him time or go to him and penetrate his absorption gently, explaining to him what comes next. And make the next thing seem pleasant and interesting.

If we will just give him a chance to obey the laws of his being we are almost sure to have a happy, satisfied child.

Don't Pretend Indifference in Case of Love

BY DORIS BLAKE.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"Why must every young man think that when a girl responds to his love with sincere appreciation she expects—yes, hopes—day in and day out, that he will propose? Can't they see that we enjoy our freedom just as much as does the stronger sex?

"To cite my own case as an example: I fell in love with the grandest fellow who ever walked this earth. It was a case of love at first sight. Every time he smiled my heart would go for a tailspin. We were so happy, and mind you, it was he who did the pursuing. Every time he tried to mention marriage to me, I would change the subject without making it too obvious. I suppose I did realize that sooner or later, in a moment of weakness, I would promise to marry him, for there is no denying that I loved him more than life itself.

"Well, to make a long story less long, comes winter and he breaks up our love match, claiming he cannot afford to marry at present as he doesn't want to deprive me of the entertainment that other fellows can provide me. Humorous? I can hear you laughing when all along it was he, not I, who had been getting serious. Even if his excuse were sincere, what right had he to assume that I would marry him, even if he were in a position to do so? True, we had been going about steadily and he knew I loved him, but I never said I would marry him.

"Since the breakup I have been going a fast and merry pace, accepting invitations from every one who'd ask me, but being bored stiff evening after evening and laughing and flirting when I had all I could do to keep from crying out loud. To make matters worse, I heard from friends that he has not gone out with another girl and so—what am I to think?

"BLUE ANGEL."

"P. S. Why don't you instruct the conceited males that we aren't all mariage crazy?"

You are to think, Blue Angel, that you are a perfectly ridiculous young lady. And that your argument is downright silly. What's wrong with you, and why the tears lie so close to the edge of your lids, is that you want that young man more than you want your substitute good time. Isn't it true? More than you want anything? But you've been reading silly literature that's going to lead you into a no man's land unless you hurry up and react like a normal young woman to the attentions of a normal young man. You'd better hurry and get yourself straightened out before you are dismissed as a bit nutty—pretending indifference to love and marriage and wanting it to the point of tears with this fine young person.

Danger on the Border

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

INSTALMENT XXIX.
A MURDER.

"Kent will talk Dillon into a partnership agreement in five minutes," Collins swore under his breath as he realized the opportunity he had overlooked. "I could have done it myself."

He began to think more calmly. If he was going to learn the facts, it was time to begin. And the first thing to do was to hide his car. He remembered a spot further up the canyon where he could turn out from the bed of the gulch and park between two huge boulders. When he drove across the Little Mesa of the Dead the whining of his gears was barely audible and the glare of his headlights was hidden from the heights on his right hand by the steepness of the cliffs. But the lights showed clear and bright in the eyes of the man who was coming down the trail from the old mine before Collins shut them off.

It was Dillon, and he was driving four burros; they were heavily packed. It had taken him a long time to round up the little animals, for they had drunk deeply from the waterholes in the canyon that afternoon and had strayed several miles along the ridge, seeking good feed. The task of gathering up his possessions had used up another two hours.

He hated the sight of the mine. He had been working here for months, living alone, cooking his own meals. Daylight until dark, toiling with single jack and steel, seven days a week. Every third day the lonely journey back and forth along the steep trail to bring twenty gallons of water in five-gallon oil tins from the tanks.

There was that eight foot fellow that he had found coiled in his blankets one night when he was going to bed.

Hard work and loneliness and only high hopes to keep him going. Now all the hopes were gone. Ever since he had departed from the old hotel this afternoon he had been weighed down by the burden of that tragic news.

"Just a trace of gold." All the way out to the mine he had kept repeating the words of the assayer over and over. He was stunned, unable to think ahead. He was a failure!

When at last he had gotten his blankets and grub together he knew that he could not stay in this spot another minute. He did not have the heart to go into the tunnel for his tools. "I'll never use them again."

It had never occurred to him that there was a possibility of mistake. When Pat had suggested the likelihood of a false report on the assay he had not given it a passing thought. That was an old, old story, crooked assayers. He had heard it a good many times, and he had laughed at it.

But when he saw the lights of the car down in the canyon the truth was revealed to him.

He had been working so long in secret; he had taken such pains to hide the beginning of the trail where it left the canyon; he had spent so many hours waiting for chance visitors to the canyon to depart before he showed his face. And now a car was here, near midnight. The fear which had always been present, the dread that some one might follow him and learn his secret, drove his mind straight to the truth.

There was only one person save Pat who knew what he was doing. And that was Collins. If Collins had followed him it meant one thing. The report on that assay was false. The revelation burst upon him. It took full possession of him when he saw Collins get out of the car and step into the glaring pathway which the headlights threw before them. A moment later the lights went out.

In those last few minutes of his life Dillon knew that he owned riches. The knowledge had a profound effect upon him. All these years he had been a defeated man worn down by sickness, incapable. Now he had attained wealth. The feeling of power was strong, it made him sure. He came on past the burros, down the last steep stretch, eager for this meeting. He distinguished the figure of the man beside the car. He stepped in front of him.

"Well," he demanded, "what are you doing here?"

Collins was startled. The prospector had appeared as if out of nowhere. He stared at him for a moment in silence. When the astonishment passed his first feeling was of outrage. This man who confronted him so truculently had allied himself with a crook. And the two of them were going to keep that high grade ore to themselves. He laughed unpleasantly and he met the question with another.

"Where's Kent? I want to talk with that fellow."

As soon as Collins had gotten the words out of his mouth he realized the full extent of his mistake. Dillon repeated the name dully.

"Kent? What do you mean?"

Collins turned away and went back to the car door. He placed his hand on the knob. He wanted to get out of this. Anything to avoid further mischance. Then the impulse passed. He had to face it, the bold course was the best.

There was no doubt as to the completeness of Dillon's surprise. It was clear that there were no relations between him and Kent. There was still chance that he could be talked into an alliance. All it needed was quick thinking and ready words. . . .

"So," Dillon was talking slowly. "It's Kent you're looking for? He's in this with you."

"See here," Collins interrupted swiftly, "I've got some information for you, Dillon. Kent's out here——"

"How does Kent know anything about this?" Dillon came forward and moved his face close to the other's as he asked the question. "What brings that crook out on my trail?" He laughed shortly. "See here, Collins, I'd like to get the correct figures on that assay just for fun. Not that it matters. I've sent some ore to a good friend of mine in El Paso, and I'll get the figures anyhow."

That settled it. The color left the other's face. If Dillon ever got those returns it meant one thing. He thought of San Quentin: the lower yard, crowds of men in drab prison suits, the smell that comes from the cell blocks.

A queer thing happened then. It was one of those slight accidents which sometimes occur at just the proper moment to bring unexpected results. Kent was crouching in the shadows, as silent as the rocks about him. It was Leonard who made the sound that caused the two men to turn abruptly. He was coming down into the canyon from the high tank and his feet dislodged a rock.

"I think that's your friend Kent now," Dillon said, and stepped past Collins. He looked intently into the darkness beyond the pool of moonlight which lay upon the Little Mesa of the Dead. "Why don't you call him? I'd like to have a show down with you two."

Collins saw the disaster which was about to fall. He realized that even if he had not betrayed himself it would still be impending. He had gotten another glimpse of Dillon's face, and he knew that there would never be a chance of placating him. His hand was resting on the door of his car, the window was open. He slipped the hand inside and he picked up the prospector's pick. He put the whole weight of his body behind the blow as he drove the point down between Dillon's shoulders.

It had taken him an instant. Just time enough to reach his hand into the car, to grasp the handle, to drive the pick home. At the beginning of that instant his blood was hot, his eyes were flaming, every nerve in his body was tightened to the one purpose. At the end of it he was standing still, a chill was racking him, his mouth hung open, and his eyes were dull.

Dillon was walking down the canyon. Collins stared at him, unbelieving. He heard a voice calling his name very quietly.

"They don't hang a man for murder in Arizona," the voice said. "They take him to the Florence penitentiary and stand him up before a firing squad."

A soft voice. It was as smooth as thick oil. He whirled, and the hand which had held the prospector's pick a moment ago was clenched. He let it drop to his side when he saw the leveled revolver.

"Take it easy," Kent said. "Don't lose your head."

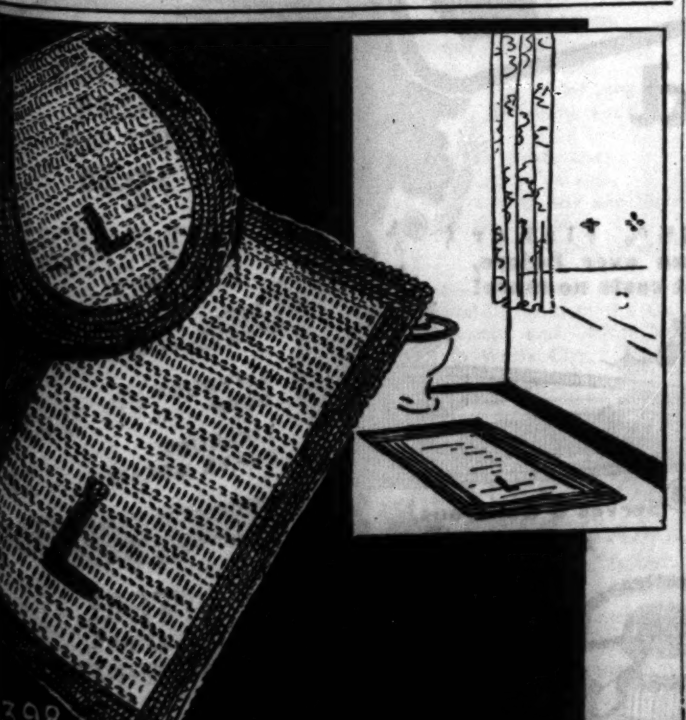
Bath Mat and Seat Cover



BY ELLEN BRUCE.

Five hanks of knitting worsted will create one square bath mat and bath seat with enough wool left over for tie backs for the curtains. Double and single crochet are the two stitches used for the mat as well as the seat. Depending upon individual diligence, a bath set usually may be crocheted in two days. The less industrious will require from four days to one week. Keep this set in mind as a gift suggestion for any period of the year.

For instructions in crocheting the square bath mat and seat cover, No. X-398, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Mr. Stock Takes a Bow Even on Kreisler Night

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Fritz Kreisler appeared at Orchestra hall last night as violin soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and these opening paragraphs would normally be devoted to his exploits. Frederick Stock, however, took this proud position right away from him by conducting a stunningly great performance of the Rachmaninoff E minor symphony.

The drama of this whole situation is somewhat lessened, one must admit in passing, by the fact that no two men in the world care less than Kreisler and Stock what position they get here or whether they get any position.

In view of last evening's performance of the Rachmaninoff symphony it is fortunate indeed that the Boston orchestra is safely out of earshot now and that one can declare ecstatically that neither that orchestra nor any orchestra can sing a melody quite as grandly as the Chicago.

Those dark, gloriously curved themes of the Rachmaninoff, which reflect so perfectly not only the superficial, Gloomy Gus character of their composer but also his great emotional depth and dignity, profited by a delivery which was magnificently sonorous, spectacularly rich of texture, and perfectly even in its flow. The audience clapped and almost howled at the end of the piece.

When Kreisler is good he is very, very good, and when he is bad he is—no, not that—only a little erratic. Last night he got off to a not so good start in his performance of the Beethoven concerto, and he was unable—despite a great many passages of heart stopping beauty—to play himself and his audience completely back into the rapt mood of the piece. There were several unscheduled tonal effects, and the usual Kreisler poise and richness were, in general, less in evidence than usual.

The evening began with "A Pagan Festival Overture" by the American composer Paul White. The work had never before been performed in Chicago. Its pregnant themes and its structural logic are matters for admiration, but it fails [or failed last night] to cross the footlights with much urgency or communicative power.

GIVE FREER OPERA

"Little Women," an opera by Eleanor Everest Freer of Chicago, was presented in the Civic theater last night by a cast of local singers. The performance, a benefit for the Illinois Opera guild, was well attended.

At the Civic Opera house Verdi's "Rigoletto" received its second and last presentation of the season. The cast included Hilde Reggiani, Joseph Bentonelli, and Robert Weede.

The extra performance of "Il Trovatore" scheduled for Sunday evening by the Chicago City Opera company has been canceled. In "Louise," tomorrow night, Doris Doe, instead of Maria Claessens, will sing the part of the mother.

Group Is Organized to Help Musicians Start Their Careers

The National Artists' Foundation has been organized in Chicago to help outstanding young musical artists get started at a career. The nonprofit organization is under the direction of Norman Alexandroff and a group of educators.

If an applicant for a career is accepted at a private audition he will be given a Chicago debut before an audience selected by the foundation. The artist will receive a fee of $100. If the debut is successful the foundation will seek recital opportunities at the educational institutions which it hopes to interest in the plan. It is expected that the artist will reimburse the foundation for funds expended in launching a successful career.

The educators on the foundation's board include John A. Lapp, sociologist; Dean Ernest O. Melby, Profs. William Gallerman and E. T. McSwain of Northwestern university; John A. Bartky and John De Boer, president and director of practice teaching, respectively, at Chicago Teachers' college, and Herman Hofer Hegner and Frances Horwich, president and dean, respectively, of the Pestalozzi-Froebel Teachers' college.

8 GOLFERS TIE NELSON AT 68 IN MIAMI OPEN

22 Shoot Under Par in First Round.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 14 (AP).—Eight golfers, among them Byron Nelson, national open champion, scored two under par 68's today to share the first round lead in the $10,000 Miami open.

Battling for the year's professional supremacy, Nelson played steady golf to put together a pair of 34's and forge two strokes ahead of his rival, Henry Picard, in their duel for the Harry Vardon trophy. Picard, Professional Golf association champion, who equaled par on each nine for his 70, leads Nelson by five points for the year's competition.

Metz Gets a 68.

Fourteen others, including an amateur, Wilford Wehrle, Chicago district champion, clipped a stroke off par with 69's. The professionals with 69 were Craig Wood of New York, Ed Dudley of Philadelphia, Jim Turnesa of Providence, R. I.; Maurie O'Connor of Belleville, N. J.; Jimmie McHale of Saranac, N. Y.; E. J. [Dutch] Harrison of Little Rock, Ark.; Frank Moore of Reading, Pa.; Joe Turnesa of Rockville Center, N. Y.; Denny Shute of Huntington, W. Va.; Marvin Stahl of Lansing, Mich.; Ben Hogan of White Plains, N. Y.; Ralph Hutchison of Bethlehem, Pa., and Paul Runyan of White Plains.

Picard, McSpaden Shoot 70's.

Picard, who made a birdie and a bogey on each side, shared the 70 spot with Harold [Jug] McSpaden of Boston, last year's Miami open winner; Johnny Revolta of Chicago, Bill Heinlein of Indianapolis, Felix Serafin of Scranton, Pa.; Frank Walsh of Dunellen, N. J.; Henry Poe of Reading, Pa., and Sam Byrd of Philadelphia.

Guldahl had the best chance to carve out a clear cut lead. Out in par 35, he clicked off four birdies in the next six holes and needed only pars on the final three for a 66. He made a par 3 on the 16th, but went one over on the 17th, where he missed the green, and then three putted for a five on the par four home hole.

MOUNT CARMEL ACCEPTS BID TO PLAY IN FLORIDA

Prep Eleven Will Engage All-Stars Dec. 30.

BY JAMES SEGRETI.

Mount Carmel High school's football team, Catholic league champion, which scored two touchdowns in a spectacular last quarter rally to tie Fenger in Chicago's All-City game two weeks ago, last night accepted an invitation to play an All-Star eleven in West Palm Beach, Fla., on Dec. 30. Announcement of the champions' acceptance was made by the Rev. Theodore J. Hatton, Mount Carmel principal.

The bid to appear in the southern city on the Atlantic seaboard came as an early Christmas gift to the members of the Mount Carmel squad which played without substitution in halting Fenger's 22 game winning streak. Coaches Wally Fromhart and Fred Mundee and a team of 25 players will leave Chicago for West Palm Beach on Dec. 27 over the Illinois Central railroad.

Pick Squad Next Week.

Coach Fromhart said the 38 members of the squad will begin preparations for the postseason game today in Jackson park. There will be daily workouts until the departure date. Members of the team which will make the trip to West Palm Beach will be selected late next week.

However, among the regular members of the squad who will appear against West Palm beach, barring injuries in practice, are Johnny Andretich, captain and left half back, and Frankie Meakim, right half back, the school's Touchdown Twins, who played important rôles in the 13 to 13 tie with Fenger. Sigmund Czarobski, junior tackle, and Tom Creevy, senior quarter back, who also gave notable performances against the Public School league champions, are two others certain to make the trip.

Squad to Be Honored.

The squad, winner of two consecutive Catholic league championships, will be honored by alumni and supporters in one of the biggest high school banquets in several years in the Palmer House Monday night. Civic officials, collegiate coaches, and sports celebrities will be among the speakers. The dinner will begin at 6:30 o'clock.

Mayor Kelly, the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, and Elmer Layden, University of Notre Dame football coach, have accepted invitations to appear at the banquet. Other speakers will be the Rev. Paschal Baeir, Mount Carmel athletic director; Coaches Fromhart and Mundee, and Andretich. Father Theodore will distribute sweaters, monograms, and awards and the players will name a captain for 1940.

Ask Packers to Face All-Stars; They Accept

Green Bay, Wis., Dec. 14 [Special].—E. L. [Curley] Lambeau, coach of Green Bay's Packers, professional football champions, tonight accepted before 1,500 fans the formal invitation to participate in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE All-Star game on Aug. 29 of next year. The invitation was extended by Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE and originator of the All-Star contest.

Lambeau termed the annual event "a marvelous spectacle," saying that it was a credit to Ward and THE TRIBUNE.

Present at the testimonial banquet was Gov. Julius P. Heil, who praised the Packers for their record and their bringing fame not only to Green Bay, but to all Wisconsin. Also present were 10 members of the first Packer championship team, that of 1929.

In talking of the All-Star game, Lambeau said: "It is the greatest football spectacle in the country each year. Other all-star games do not compare to that of THE TRIBUNE, as the sponsors do not pick teams from the entire country but get their stars from their own sections. And THE TRIBUNE game has not 24, 30, or 33 players, but has 70 well drilled men under the direction of five of the country's best coaches. They are the best prepared all-star squad in the nation."

Ward called the Green Bay team the outstanding football team of the league, and said he was happy to have the assignment extending to the champions of the world the invitation to play in Soldiers' field next year.

KLEIN SCORES EIGHT GOALS TO PACE WILDCATS

Purple Leads, 17-9, at Half Time.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Northwestern's Wildcats, with a revamped starting personnel, turned out a neat, workmanlike basketball performance last night, whipping Washington State, 41 to 29. Northwestern took the lead in the first minute, led, 17 to 9, at the intermission, and raced on to a 14 point advantage in the next six minutes, which erased any faint hopes the Cougars may have entertained.

Don Kruger, in his first appearance of the season, paired with Les Harman. Dick Klein was the starting center. Except for substitution of Al Butherus for Harman near the end of the game and the brief appearance of Chuck Melchoir and Don Clawson in the final minute, the Wildcat starting lineup kept the floor. Ad Vance and Bob Shepard were the guards, with Shepard moving up court after the tipoff and Klein taking over the duties of floor guard.

Cougars' First Defeat.

Northwestern's attack was immeasurably improved over the showing against Carleton. This was due to faster and more accurate passing, to an aggressiveness lacking before, and to Washington State's startling defensive weakness in man to man guarding. Altho last night's defeat was the first for the Cougars this year in eight games, the visitors had no advantage save height and in shooting from far out on the court.

Whether Northwestern has improved sufficiently to become a factor in the Big Ten race can be better judged after the game tomorrow night in Patten gymnasium with Pittsburgh.

Klein was the principal cog in the Northwestern attack, either starting the passing from midcourt, serving as pivot man near the free throw line, or cutting for the shots. The ambidextrous sophomore marked up 17 points with eight field goals, equally divided between the halves, and a second period penalty shot.

Best Since Reiff.

His feinting with the ball, pivoting, passing, willingness to follow up, and his accuracy—he scored his eight goals in 21 shots—stamp him as the best all around prospect since Joe Reiff. Moreover, Klein's cockiness is an advantage except when it backfires, as it did twice in the closing minutes when passes to flat-footed players were intercepted by Washington State. Making Klein's play more effective was the coördination of Vance and Harman. Kruger's defense was his principal contribution. The majority of Northwestern's goals were scored from under the back board either on openings from blocks, feints and dribbles, or followups. Washington State didn't score its first field goal until after ten minutes. Northwestern then had a 13 to 3 lead.

Klein, Shepard and Vance accounted for five field goals in six minutes of the second period and a 27 to 13 advantage. This lever, backed by more agility on defense, forced the Cougars to long distance shooting.

OHIO, 34; WABASH, 22

Columbus, O., Dec. 14 [Special].—Ohio State tonight defeated Wabash college, 34 to 22, before 1,501. The Buckeyes were minus three of their regulars who recently were ruled ineligible for scholastic reasons. They are Capt. Robert Lynch, guard; Bill Sattler, center, and John Schick, forward. These difficulties are expected to be solved before the holidays, however.

Ohio led, 24 to 11, at the half, and the scoring was fairly even during the second half, Wabash scoring 11 points to Ohio's 10.

The leading scorer for Wabash was Craven, left guard who made four field goals. Dick Fisher, sophomore forward, led the Buckeyes with four goals. Lineup:

The victory cut short a two game losing streak and at the same time put an end to a two game winning streak of the Americans. The overtime goals were scored by Louis Trudel, who fired a long shot that Goalie Earl Robertson apparently didn't see, and by Charlie Sands, who rammed the puck home with only three seconds to go. Faurot Defends Acceptance of Orange Bowl Bid

Columbia, Mo., Dec. 14 (AP).—Coach Don Faurot today branded as unfair to the athletic committee the Missouri student editorial which said the Orange bowl bid was accepted only because of "the deliberate and uncompromising move of the athletic committee to cash in on a good football team."

"If any one should be criticized by the student editor, I am the one, not the athletic committee," Faurot said. "The athletic committee was reluctant to approve any bowl game, but on the insistence of myself and 34 of my 37 players, they consented—only, however, after I assured them we would practice only four times before the Christmas vacation began and the boys would not miss a single class."

Faurot said the athletic committee approved the game and trip more as a reward for the players than for the financial gain.

"In fact," he added, "the committee turned down one bowl bid that appeared more lucrative, just so the boys could take this trip to Florida.

"The athletic committee has authorized Business Manager Spurling not to pinch pennies on the trip and to show the boys a good time."

Answering the Missouri student editorial, which charged university students could not attend the Orange bowl game without loss of credit hours, Faurot remarked:

"As far as the students are concerned, if they care to come back from Florida on the same train with the team they will not miss any school time. We will return in time for the start of classes the morning of Jan. 3, the day Christmas holidays end."

The Tigers scrimmaged this afternoon, working on pass offense and defense.

Lake Forest to Play Third Game Tonight

Jacksonville, Ill., Dec. 14 [Special].—The Illinois college basketball team will open its conference season tomorrow night against Lake Forest, which already has played two games. The home team will go into the game without the services of George Moxon, star center and high scorer whose elbow was broken in practice last week.

Coach Claude M. Beasley is grooming Thompson and Petraitis, football regulars, for Moxon's position, but has not decided which will start.

Two former high school teammates will be pitted against each other in George Harrison of Lake Forest and Joe Hagelauer of Illinois college. Both are forwards, which positions they played at Amundsen High school in Chicago. Another local starter will be Milt Ganson at forward, with Co-Captains Art Yates and John Bellatti at the guards.

Lake Forest lost to the Chicago Teachers, 41 to 32, and won over Armour Tech, 50 to 36.

The Jaybirds are expected to depend for their scoring punch on four sophomores—Jake Dishinger, Bill Boehm, Bill Bulow, and Bob Patterson. Bob McKenna and Floyd Gates, in addition to Harrison, also will see plenty of action.

Following the Illinois college game Lake Forest will go to Decatur where it will meet Millikin university on Saturday, after which the squad will disband until Dec. 28, when workouts will start for the Armour Tech return game of Jan. 4.

NEW CAPTAIN NAMED.

State College, Pa., Dec. 14 [Special].—William J. Smith of Philadelphia, Pa., has been elected captain of Penn State's cross country team for next season, succeeding Frank Maule, also of Philadelphia.

Kenneally to Meet Murray in Six Rounder

Tom Kenneally, 1934 Catholic Youth organization heavyweight champion, tonight will return to action after a three month layoff in a six round bout against Ed [Tipperary] Murray of Cleveland. The site is White City, 63d street and South Park avenue. Kenneally, who was knocked out by Bob Nestell in his last effort, will attempt to redeem himself at the expense of Murray, who won two previous Chicago fights. After whipping Selman Martin last Aug. 2 he followed up by conquering William Snell on Dec. 1.

A six round secondary feature will involve Billy Seward, aggressive Ingamor, Mont., lightweight, and Tommy Parker of Lexington, Ky. In an earlier meeting Seward was the winner of a four round slugging match.

In a third contest of six rounds Johnny Janis, popular Brighton Park heavyweight, will face Selman Martin. This also is a rematch, the men going four rounds to a draw previously. Janis will be trying for his sixth consecutive triumph this time.

Steve Souris, Gary welterweight puncher, is paired with Harry [Kid] Tunero, competent New Orleans fighter, in a four round event. In a four round opener Kenney Cannon and Billy Sherman, featherweight rivals, will meet.

Al Hostak, middleweight champion, who last Monday night knocked out Eric Seelig, will meet Tony Zale of Chicago in the Stadium on Jan. 12, it was announced yesterday by Hank Marino, Hostak's manager.

Harold Rodie, 124th Field Artillery armory middleweight, and Freddy Ford will clash in a five round contest heading the amateur boxing show in Madison Athletic club, 4711 Madison street, tonight. Bob Earl, Morgan park lightweight, and Stanley Stockings will be opponents in a five round semifinal. Andy Sterling, south side featherweight, is paired with Tommy Mair in one of five matches set for three rounds.

HAWKS FINALLY GET GOOD NEWS: SEIBERT'S READY

The battered Blackhawks received some cheering news following yesterday's 60 minute scrimmage on the Stadium rink, when Manager Paul Thompson announced that Earl Seibert, star defense man, who has been out of action because of injury since Nov. 16, is ready again. Earl will take his place beside Art Wiebe when the Hawks meet the champion Boston Bruins in the Stadium Sunday night.

Phil Hergesheimer, injured for the second time this season, surprised every one by taking part in yesterday's drill. At the conclusion of the workout it was announced that if the rangy right winger's knee holds up as well today as it did yesterday, Hergesheimer will play Sunday. Joe Cooper still was on the sidelines but is expected to try his injured knee in today's workout.

LOU AMBERS IS VOTED COMEBACK KING OF 1939

Lefty Grove Ranked 2d, Only 6 Points Back.

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Lou Ambers, the first fighter ever to regain the lightweight championship from the man who dethroned him, has been elected the prize "comeback" of 1939 by the country's sports experts who participated in the Associated Press' ninth annual poll.

The little Herkimer hurricane, who won his 135-pound title back from Henry Armstrong in their famous battle of the fouls, barely nosed out the veteran Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox for the distinction, with 56 points to 50 for the pitcher. Tony Galento, the heavyweight fighter, placed third with 43 points.

Ambers Gets 13 Firsts.

Altogether, 67 athletes were nominated as first, second, or third choice by 73 writers. Ambers was the first choice of 13, while 10 voted for Grove and 9 for Tony. Three points were awarded for first, two for second, one for third.

It was a close race between Ambers and Grove right down to the final batch of votes. Whereas Ambers' victory over Armstrong in their second battle was clouded somewhat by the fact he was awarded five rounds on fouls, Grove's remarkable performance was clean-cut.

In 1938 Lefty's arm went dead and as he was on the brink of 40 there wasn't much hope he ever would pitch effective ball again. Yet he came back the past season to win 15 games, lose only four and keep the Red Sox in second place in the American League.

Meade's Up There.

Galento's comeback was from the siege of double pneumonia that laid the great bartender low and threatened to end his ring career just when he was about to reach the contender class. Also, when Tony made his heroic stand against Champion Joe Louis and then knocked out Lou Nova, he wiped out the memory of several malodorous built-up bouts.

Fourth on the list with 29 points, and the choice of six voters as the outstanding comeback, was Don Meade, the little jockey from South Dakota. Restored to the saddle after being grounded nearly three years by racing officials, he was the leading winner of the season.

Nile Kinnick, Iowa football player, and Al Hostak, Seattle middleweight fighter, each received four first-place votes. Dick Metz, Chicago golfer; Dutch Leonard, the veteran pitcher who won 20 games for Washington; Curt Davis, St. Louis Cardinals' pitcher, and Bob Feller, Cleveland pitcher, gained two first place votes apiece.

TODD DEFEATS LUTHER, 18-16, IN OVERTIME GAME

Todd school of Woodstock came from behind to defeat Luther institute, 18 to 16, last night on the Todd court in a Chicago Private School league game.

A basket by Cunningham tied the count at 15 to 15 at the finish of the regulation game. In the overtime period Busch registered a free throw to put Luther in front, Stephens tossed in a long one to place the home club ahead, and then Downs added a free throw.

FLASH! YANKEES WIN AGAIN—IN LEAGUE MOVIES

Annual Production Voted a Success.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The world premiere of "Touching All Bases," the new American league movie, was given yesterday at a party tossed by President Will Harridge in the Palmer House. It was the sixth of the league's series of yearly promotional baseball films and generally adjudged by critics who have seen them all to be the best.

The new sports feature was prepared and directed by Lew Fonseca and includes four reels of sound movies, with a preface on sand lot and juvenile baseball, followed by educational shots in which American league stars demonstrate the proper way to play the several positions, views of actual American league competition and of the 1939 world series.

Review Centennial.

Considerable footage is devoted to the Centennial celebration in Cooperstown, N. Y., last summer, in which Commissioner K. M. Landis, Connie Mack, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and many others participated.

During the course of the educational phase of the film views of all American league parks, and group pictures of all teams as well as individual interviews and demonstrations are presented.

The show winds up with the world series shots and somehow one gets the idea that the American league, thru its entry, the Yankees, has done fairly well in recent world series. The film, however, skips the 1939 All-Star game, which also was won by the Yankees with some help trom the rest of the league.

It's a Finished Job.

In a speech before the presentation, Director Fonseca explained the production had been completed at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. The film, however, showed no results of hasty polishing off. Fonseca, who has had a part in all six films of the series, said that the five previous ones had been viewed by more than 20,000,000 and that the new reels will be available for from one to 200 shows a day after Jan. 15.

Among several hundred guests of Mr. Harridge at the movie party was Jimmy Dykes. Jim came from his home in Philadelphia for the premiere. He opened his address by saying he had a bum heel, causing some of his auditors to question him as to whether he had made another player deal. Jim explained to a heckler that he was explaining a limp and not referring to additions to his White Sox roster.

Olivera must meet Georgie Pace of Cleveland, named by the Natonal Boxing association as world titlist, and recognized in 36 states as such, for the undisputed title.

Bert Bell Turns Over Coaching Job to Miller

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 14 (AP).—Bert Bell, owner-coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, professional football team, said tonight he will devote all his time to front office details as soon as Heinie Miller, his new coach, learns the ropes in National league football. Miller, a former University of Pennsylvania football star, resigned as coach at St. Joseph's college at the end of the season to accept the professional coaching position.

Kalamazoo to Test Loyola Five Tonight

Loyola university's basketball team faces its third opponent of the year tonight in Kalamazoo college, 1938-39 Michigan Conference champion, in Loyola gymnasium. The Ramblers are in quest of their twenty-eighth consecutive victory at home.

Kalamazoo offers Coach Lennie Sachs his last opportunity to experiment with possible combinations before meeting the major opponents of the season.

Only Three Left.

Capt. George Wenskus, Vinny Graham, and Ed Schell are the only players left over from last year's squad. Danny Cahill and Ed Lee have filled the two remaining positions, but no capable substitute for any of the players has been discovered. Jack Crowley, from whom much is expected, has not been able to do his best due to a leg injury. Of the remaining seven members of the squad, Joe Ptacin, Augie Durso, and Bruno Krzeminski seem to be the best.

Visitors Lose Twice.

So far this season Kalamazoo has dropped games to Notre Dame and Michigan State for the second year, but in doing so turned in a better performance than in last season's games.

PIRATES DRAFT COLLEGE STAR A YEAR TOO EARLY

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 14 (AP).—The Pittsburgh pro football Pirates learned today they were a year too soon in picking Leon Gajecki, Penn State center, in the National Football league draft. Gajecki is only a junior. The mistake occurred because the college's program for the Pitt-Penn State game erroneously listed him as a senior.

The star center, captain of next year's eleven, was pleased by the recognition. If he plays professional football after graduation, the Pirates would have an early claim on him.

ZUPPKE PLANS TO RELAX—AND WATCH TROJANS

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 14 [Special].—Coach Bob Zuppke, having completed his high school speaking engagements, which have kept him on the go since the end of the football season, will depart next Wednesday for Arizona to relax for several weeks. However, he will combine business with pleasure by inspecting Southern California against Tennessee in the Rose bowl game. The Trojans play at Illinois on Oct. 12 next season.

ILLINOIS WILL FACE CARLETON FIVE TONIGHT

Mills Alters Illini Lineup for Game.

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 14 [Special].—Carleton college of Northfield, Minn., whose defense has already puzzled four Big Ten basketball teams, will engage its fifth conference opponent in two weeks when it plays Illinois here tomorrow night. Altho it lost all four games, Carleton held Iowa, Northwestern, and Minnesota to 30 points or less.

Coach Doug Mills has moved Capt. Bill Hapac back to forward after a trial at center and Johnny Drish, regular forward last year, has been shifted to guard. Bob Richmond is at the other guard. His speed and aggressiveness lend punch to the attack.

Hapac's return to forward leaves a three way fight for the pivot position among Vic Wukovits, Bob O'Neill, and Harry Lasater. Wukovits still holds a slight advantage and will probably start. Others likely to see action are O'Neill and Lasater, centers; Colin Handlon, Harold Shapiro, Bill Hocking, and Joe Frank, guards; Rex Sherman and Scott Gill, forwards.

STAGG WILL BE COACHES' GUEST AT COAST DINNER

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 14 (AP).—The American Football Coaches' association will honor Amos Alonzo Stagg and his 50th anniversary of coaching at its convention Dec. 29. With Fritz Crisler of Michigan chairman of the event, the coaches will tender Stagg, now at College of Pacific, a banquet in the ballroom of a Los Angeles hotel. More than 200 coaches, headed by President Lou Little of Columbia university, are expected to attend the convention.

TEACHERS FIVE TO MEET MILWAUKEE STATE TONIGHT

The Chicago Teachers college basketball team will play Milwaukee State Teachers college tonight in the school gym, 6800 Stewart avenue. The south side quintet will seek its third straight victory and its fourth of the season.

Joe Podraza, sophomore forward, leads the team in scoring for five games with 52 points, while Capt. Joe King, junior guard, and Rog Mulcahy, junior forward, are runners-up with 35 and 29 points, respectively.

TWO CHICAGOANS TO PLAY WITH CULVER POLOISTS

Indiana Team Will Battle Woodland Tomorrow.

Two Chicagoans, Thomas P. Connors and Ralph W. Harris, will be in the starting lineup of the Culver Military academy polo team tomorrow night when the Hoosier trio meets the Woodland club of Hinsdale in an interstate game which will provide one-half of the Metropolitan league double header in the 124th Field Artillery armory.

Connors will ride at No. 3, Harris at No. 2, and Louis Farr III. of Barnhart, Tex., captain of the team, at No. 1. Jake Reams of Middlesboro, Ky., has been named as alternate. Polo has been a regular feature of the Culver sports program for years, and the team has appeared in Chicago a number of times, but this game marks its debut in league competition.

The Woodland club has named Claude Mackey, Curtis Mitchell, Ernie Lambesis, and Jerry Fordon. The last named trio will rotate at two positions with Mackey holding down the defense position. To date, Culver has won its three opening games, while the Woodlands have won one and lost one in league play.

The windup game tomorrow night will send Oak Brook against the 124th Field Artillery team in a senior division game.

ICC APPROVES TRAINLOAD RAIL RATE REDUCTION

Decision Reverses Former Policy.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—Reversing a long time policy, the Interstate Commerce commission today approved the establishment of reduced railroad rates for multiple car shipments.

Joseph B. Eastman, concurs in opinion.

The commission in an 8 to 2 decision ruled there is "nothing unlawful" in the establishment of rates on a quantity larger than a carload, moving as a single shipment, when the rates are designed to meet competition from other modes of transportation. It stipulated, however, that "a just and reasonable relation" must be maintained in rates between the larger and smaller quantities.

Cites Past Decisions.

"In past decisions," he said, "it [the commission] has voiced the view that it is unjust discrimination, and hence unlawful, to give the shipper of trainload or multiple carload quantities a perference in rates over the shipper of single carloads.

"Apparently the basis for this view," he added, "has been consideration of public policy rather than considerations directly relating to transportation; that is to say that such preference would tend to concentrate business in the hands of large concerns, contrary to the public interest.

"The fact is, however, that certain other forms of transportation which compete with the railroads can lawfully, and do, give the shipper of large quantities a decided advantage over the shipper of quantities equivalent to a railroad carload."

Approves Molasses Rate.

The commission approved a rate of 15 cents a hundredweight on blackstrap molasses, in tank cars, from New Orleans and Harvey, La., to Peoria and Pekin, Ill., subject to a minimum weight of 1,800 tons, or the equivalent of 38½ tank car loads.

This rate is 1 cent higher than that proposed by the railroads participating in the traffic—the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley, Missouri Pacific, the Texas and Pacific, Chicago and Illinois Midland, Alton, Wabash and Illinois Terminal.

Commissioner Claude R. Porter, who joined with Commissioner William E. Lee in dissenting, said the majority decision was "but another step in furtherance of the discriminatory tendencies" in rate making.

"If, because of economy in transportation and competition, trainload rates are good for blackstrap molasses, why are they not good for the shipment of oil from the midcontinent field to central territory; for the shipment of sugar from New Orleans to Chicago, or for the shipment of lake cargo coal to the Great Lakes?" he asked.

OFFICIALS HAIL DECISION.

Chicago railroad officials yesterday said the Interstate Commerce commission's decision in the blackstrap molasses case is one of the most important in years, because it establishes the principle of trainload rates. Although British railroads have been able to make special rates for transporting solid trains of goods, American roads have never been permitted to effect such rates, it was said.

Establishment of the principle, it was said, is likely to result in the early start of negotiations between railroads and industry on trainload rates on coal, oil, and other products.

Tariff Filed Last May.

The case had its inception last May when the Illinois Central published a rate of 14 cents a 100 pounds for the transportation of blackstrap molasses between New Orleans and Peoria and Pekin, Ill., in trains of 40 cars or more. The purpose was to regain business lost to barges operated privately by industrial companies.

F. H. Law, freight traffic manager of the Illinois Central, described the action as a "bold move" consistent with the road's belief that transportation was its specialty rather than that of the manufacturer. The road's wish, he said, was to price its services to produce the best results.

INSURANCE MEN URGED TO FIGHT FEDERAL RULE

New York, Dec. 14 [Special].—Alertness against introduction of federal control of insurance was urged upon insurance company executives and state supervisors today by C. C. Neslen, head of the organization which represents insurance commissioners of the various states. Insurance leaders have urged the state supervisors to take a stand against federal regulation.

Neslen is insurance commissioner of Utah. Asserting he spoke for all supervisors as president of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, he included his warning in an address at the annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

Declaring new and untried plans might imperil the strength of the American insurance system, he said state supervision, with 90 years of experience, has proved its merit and should be continued.

Private Deals Profitable for Risk Examiner

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—William K. Herndon, former examiner for the Kansas state insurance department, conceded before a monopoly subcommittee today that his official position had helped him put thru many highly profitable transactions in the insurance business during the 1920s. He contended, however, that there was "nothing wrong" in his dual rôle.

Herndon described to the committee a series of transactions which brought him commissions or profits running on one occasion to more than $100,000, when he was employed intermittently on a per diem basis as state insurance examiner.

Kansas Company Involved.

Some of the transactions involved the Federal Reserve Life Insurance company of Kansas City, Kas.

The witness, a resident of Topeka, Kas., was brought here to answer testimony by Vernon B. Holt, former secretary of the Federal Reserve company, that Herndon was paid to obtain approval of the Kansas insurance department for certain activities of the company. The witness denied he had been paid for that reason.

As a state examiner, he testified, he did not report certain of his dealings with the now defunct Federal Reserve company, including one "three-way commission," because they were either "personal" deals with officials or were of "no concern" to any one other than stockholders and directors.

Defends His Dual Rôle.

"As long as the reports were truthful, I don't see anything wrong with it," Herndon said of his holding a position as examiner at the same time he was obtaining a personal profit from Federal Reserve transactions.

Another witness asserted that J. D. De Buchananne, who at one time had partial control of the Mississippi Valley Life Insurance company at St. Louis, kept numerous relatives on the pay roll, including his brother at $6,000 a year for "doing absolutely nothing."

The witness, Paul L. Temple of Webster Groves, Mo., testified that a group including Herndon had been induced to purchase a holding company controling Mississippi Valley Life.

Herndon was paid a commission of $15,000 before the sale, Temple testified, "because it was obvious the deal wouldn't go thru unless Mr. Herndon was paid the commission."

CHAMBER FINDS PRIVATE POWER SUPPLIES AMPLE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—The United States Chamber of Commerce issued a report today on the nation's electric power resources which said that the prospect was for a supply available next year to meet an industrial demand 24 per cent greater than in 1937.

The report said that existing and generator capacity now under construction could produce between 140 and 145 billion kilowatt hours in 1940, which would be 20 billion kilowatt hours above that of 1937. Industrial use of power in 1937 was the largest since 1929.

"The present program for new construction," the report said, "will be adjusted and enlarged by the utilities themselves as industrial expansion dictates. Any placing of orders by the federal government at this time for generating equipment to be installed in the industrial northeast as a national defense measure can only supplant and defer expansion by private industry. Such will be the ultimate effect of competing hydro plants installed elsewhere in the country."

50 BILLION DEBT LIMIT ADVOCATED BY MORGENTHAU

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—Members of a house appropriations subcommittee said today Secretary Morgenthau had testified he thought the public debt limit ought to be raised to $50,000,000,000 from its present level of $45,000,000,000. They said the treasury head made no formal recommendation, since the subject is one for the house ways and means committee to handle.

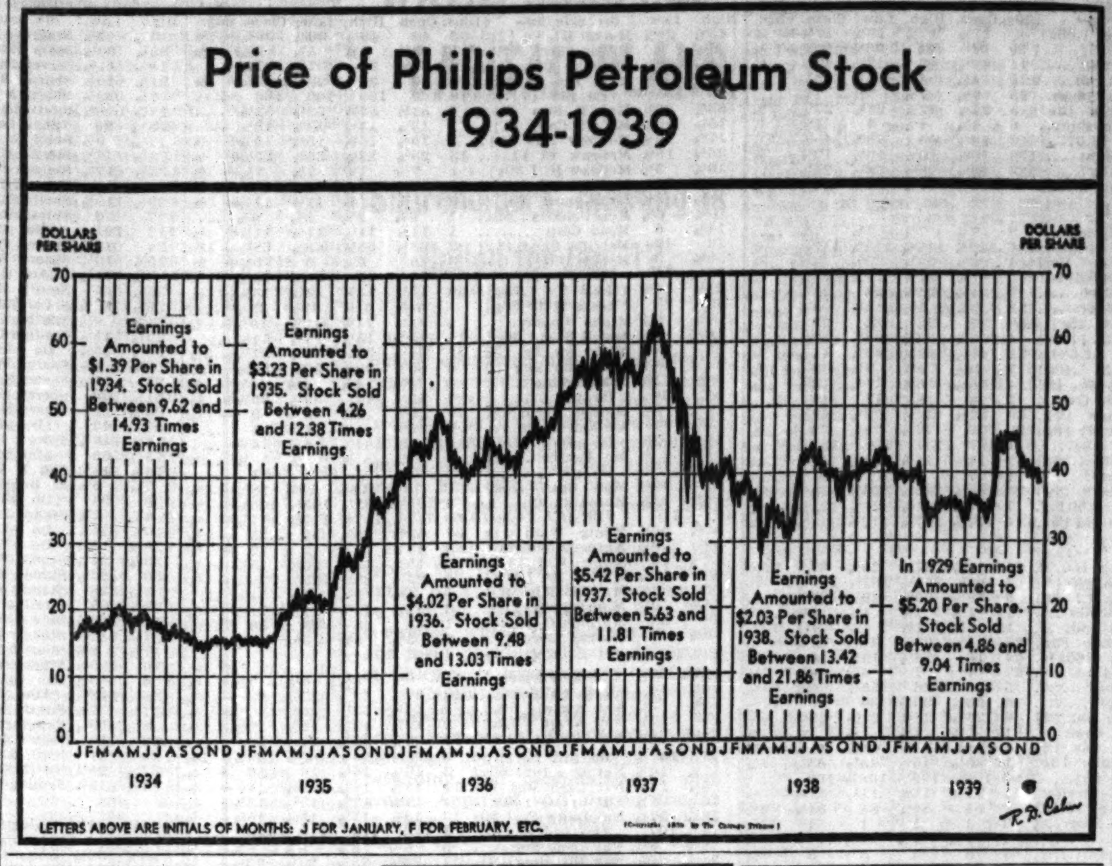
Meanwhile, Morgenthau predicted a nearly perfect acceptance of the treasury's offer of new securities in payment for $1,378,000,000 of treasury notes coming due March 15. Altho all the acceptances have not been tabulated, Morgenthau said they would approximate the results of other recent refundings, when more than 97 per cent of the holders of maturing issues took new securities instead of cash.

Pennsylvania's Turnpike Bonds to Be Offered Today

Offering will be made today of $10,000,000 Commonwealth of Pennsylvania turnpike revenue 3¾ per cent bonds, dated Aug. 1, 1938, and due Aug. 1, 1963, at 99½ and accrued interest by a banking group headed by B. J. Van Ingen & Co. The bonds are offered as a part of the $40,060,000 issue authorized to be sold to the Reconstruction Finance corporation to provide funds for the payment of a part of the cost of the new 160 mile Pennsylvania turnpike which covers most of the distance between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel Orders 30 Coal Barges

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 14 (AP).—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation today ordered 30 steel welded coal barges from the American Bridge company. They will be 175 feet long, 26 feet wide, 11 feet deep, and will require 4,500 tons of steel. Shipyards here already are working full blast.



Cotton Prices Dip $3 a Bale; Silk Advances

Cotton prices fell as much as $3 a bale in the New York futures market yesterday in a reaction that wiped out most of the gain of $4 or more in the two preceding days. Most other commodities were steady, but variations were provided by silk contracts, which climbed the permissible limit, and hides, which declined.

The cotton contracts, influenced by a plunge at Liverpool and by what brokers described as heavy profit taking, were weak from the start. Foreign buyers, to whom the upturn earlier in the week was attributed in large measure, were reported to have taken many contracts on the day's drop. However, prices rallied but little at any time and finished $1.60 to $3 a bale lower.

Follows Advance of $10.

The reversal of trend followed a forward movement that had boosted prices about $10 a bale since early in November. The advance had been based in part on increased exports to European nations which were said to need American cotton to replace cargoes lost at sea in the war.

In addition to foreign buying, there has been a good demand from domestic mills, which have found an active market for cotton textiles since the war began.

At Washington, D. C., the census bureau issued a report showing that cotton consumption last month totaled 718,721 bales of lint and 90,701 bales of linters. Consumption in October was 686,936 and 97,706, and in November, 1938, it totaled 596,416 and 68,754.

Spot Prices Decline.

Spot cotton closed 0.53 to 0.59 cent a pound lower, at 11.13 cents in New York, 10.94 cents in New Orleans, and 10.65 cents at Galveston, Tex.

The largest loss in the cotton futures was in the December delivery, which fell 0.60 cent a pound to 10.96 cents.

THREE CHICAGO CLOSED BANKS TO MAKE REFUNDS

Depositors of three closed state banks in Chicago will receive repayments of from 5 to 15 per cent and totaling $149,864, Edward J. Barrett, state auditor, announced yesterday.

A 5 per cent repayment, amounting to $20,086, is being made by the Adams State bank. The distribution is the third since the bank closed and brings the amount paid to 17 per cent. This repayment was thru funds derived from stockholders' liability suits.

Humboldt State bank depositors will be repaid 5 per cent, or a total of $95,958, from ordinary liquidation. This is the sixth repayment since the bank closed. It increases the amount repaid to 40 per cent.

The Sherman State bank will disburse 15 per cent, or $33,820. The payment is the fourth and raises the amount paid to 37½ per cent. Three per cent of the distribution represented funds acquired from the stockholders' liability suit.

Air Line Cuts Flight Time from Chicago to Florida

An additional flight and faster service between Chicago and Miami, Fla., effective today, were announced yesterday by Eastern Air Lines. The new flight will leave Chicago at 1 p. m., central time, and arrive at Miami at 11:25 p. m., eastern time, giving morning, noon and night service. The fastest time under the new schedule will be 9 hours and 25 minutes between Chicago and Miami, and 9 hours and 15 minutes between Miami and Chicago. The fastest time in the service heretofore has been 10¼ hours.

War Curtailing Customs Collections in Chicago

Customs revenues in the Chicago district for the calendar year 1939 will decline to about $11,125,560 from $11,470,177 in 1938, Joseph Ziemba, collector of customs, said yesterday. Ziemba said he expects December collections to total about $1,146,565, compared with $1,316,819 in the 1938 month. The war, he said, is having an effect on incoming shipments.

POWER COMMISSION APPROVES NEW TVA DEAL IN MISSISSIPPI

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 [Special].—The federal power commission today approved the proposed sale to the Tennessee Valley authority of electric utility properties of the Mississippi Power company valued at $3,111,718. Consummation of the sale would extend the holdings of the TVA into a large part of Mississippi.

Approval was granted on petition of the Mississippi company. The purchase price is based on book valuation. The properties to be sold consist primarily of transmission and distribution facilities.

Included, however, are a steam plant of 780 kilowatt capacity at Columbus, Miss., and an internal combustion plant of 240 kilowatt capacity, located at Macon.

The system to be sold is interconnected with the TVA lines and with Alabama Power company by a 44,000 volt line extending from Aberdeen to the Mississippi-Alabama state line and a 110,000 volt line from West Point to the interconnection at the state line.

The commission also approved TVA contracts for the extension of credits totaling $276,000 to the cities of Louisville and Philadelphia, Miss.

REDUCED COAL SHIPMENTS CUT FREIGHT VOLUME

Curtailed by a sharp drop in coal shipments, railroad freight car loadings during the week ended Dec. 9 dropped 1,623 cars from the level of the preceding week, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

However, the total of 687,265 cars showed an increase of 67,999 cars, or 11 per cent, over the 1938 week, and approximately the same gain in contrast to 1937.

Every class of freight showed an increase over the week ended Dec. 2, which included a holiday in some states, with the exception of coal and miscellaneous freight.

The association's report classified the loadings as follows:

MILWAUKEE AVE. BANK TO REPLACE SHARES OF RFC

Plans by the Milwaukee Avenue National bank to issue $47,000 of new common stock and retire $47,000 of preferred stock were announced yesterday by the board of directors.

The preferred stock formerly was held by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, but was purchased from the RFC a year ago by the bank's directors and stockholders as individuals, being the last of $50,000 of preferred originally sold to the RFC. The new common stock will be underwritten by the directors, and will be offered pro rata to present common stock holders.

The board also proposes to transfer $50,000 to surplus from undivided profits and reserves. The program is subject to approval by stockholders at a meeting Jan. 9.

FLORSHEIM NET SHARPLY HIGHER IN FISCAL YEAR

Nash, Westinghouse Also Show Gains.

Improved financial showings were made yesterday by several enterprises in the front rank of American business. Florsheim Shoe company, Nash-Kelvinator corporation, and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company issued statements reflecting the higher industrial tempo recently under way as a result of the European war and increased domestic operations.

Exceeds Prior Year's Total.

Earnings in the preceding fiscal year amounted to $456,889, or $1.14 a share of class A stock and 57 cents a class B share. In the 1936 fiscal year net income totaled $1,041,330, equal to $2.60 a class A share and $1.30 a class B share.

"Business at present continues at a satisfactory level and our plants are operating at capacity," Irving S. Florsheim, president, told stockholders in the annual statement.

Net loss of the Nash-Kelvinator corporation declined during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 to $1,573,524, against net loss of $7,655,138 in the preceding year. The company announced that altho seasonal factors will result in a loss for the December quarter, financial results will show a substantial improvement over the corresponding period last year.

Smaller Loss Forecast.

Present indications are that the current quarter will show a reduction in net loss by more than $1,000,000 from the $1,579,702 net loss during the three months ended Dec. 31 last year, the company announced.

Factory sales of the Nash Motors division are running 50 per cent ahead of last year, with the quarter's shipments estimated at 18,000 units, against 12,000 in the December quarter of 1938, the company stated. Production is under way in the Kelvinator division on the 1940 line of household appliances. Output of electric refrigerators is approximately 1,200 daily. Refrigerators, washers, and ranges will be introduced early in January.

Commenting on the fiscal year's report, the corporation's announcement said that "more than this entire loss developed in the first quarter, indicating that during the last three quarters operations were conducted at a small profit." Sales for all divisions, amounting to $72,534,000, increased 34 per cent over the previous year, the report said.

Westinghouse Net Gains.

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company reported profit of $1,822,117 for November, the largest for any month since October, 1937, when net income totaled $1,926,000.

November earnings compared with $1,363,840 for the preceding month and $1,104,137 for September. In November, 1938, net income amounted to $683,135. Earnings for the first 11 months of 1939 were boosted to $12,255,765. In the full year 1938 earnings were $9,052,773, or $3.38 a common share.

Wheat Loses Early Gain in Selling Wave

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

Closing prices on the May delivery for one day's sales.

	Yesterday.	Wednesday.	Year ago.
Wheat	$.99½	.99⅞	.66⅞
Corn	.56¼	.57⅜	.52⅛
Oats	.38¼	.39	.28⅜
Rye	.68¼	.68⅝	.45
Soy beans	1.16	1.14	.81⅜

Wheat futures closed unchanged to ⅜ cent a bushel lower on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. An early advance of 1¾ to 2 cents was checked by heavy sales as traders took profits at the peak of the sharp upturn scored in recent sessions.

Outside speculative buying was in large volume as the market opened, and December wheat climbed to $1.04 a bushel at one time, or 16 cents a bushel above the low price of Nov. 28, when the current advance got under way. The day's best price for May wheat was $1.01⅝.

July Wheat Strong.

July wheat was strong, reflecting continued dry weather over a large part of the American winter wheat belt. Firmness in the Argentine market also encouraged purchases.

Profit taking sales entered in heavier volume as prices moved up, however, and a reaction of more than 2 cents a bushel took place. Final quotations were near the day's lowest levels.

Soy beans led the early advance, with prices up around 4 cents at one time. The May sold at $1.18 and went into new high ground since July, 1937. Reports that Holland had purchased 3,500,000 bushels of beans recently and that exporters had been forced to buy 500,000 bushels in order to replace shipments made to Europe earlier in the season helped along the upturn. The close was 1½ to 2⅝ cents higher.

Trading in soy bean futures on Wednesday aggregated 1,396,000 bushels, establishing an all-time record for one day's sales.

Other Grains Follow Wheat.

Corn, oats, and rye followed the action of wheat, with all deliveries of rye in new high ground for the season at one time. Corn weakened late in the session under hedging sales and closed ⅝ to 1⅛ cents lower. Oats declined ⅝ to ¾ cent and rye was ⅜ to ⅝ cent lower.

Rumors that the department of agriculture had decided to abandon the export subsidy program on American wheat and flour, due to the current record poor outlook for the winter grain crop, stimulated considerable new buying of futures.

Easiness in cotton and other commodities encouraged speculators to take profits on their holdings of grain futures. The country sold 250,000 bushels of corn for deferred shipment to Chicago, the hedging of which had a depressing effect on the market.

DEMOCRAT FINDS TOO MUCH UNITY FOR DEMOCRATS

Democratic Congressman Henry B. Steagall of Alabama said last night that the Democratic party has had "too much unity" in the last seven years. He deplored the "unbridled power," which he indicated results from too much unity.

Steagall, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, spoke at the 192d regular meeting of the Bankers' Club of Chicago at the Drake hotel. His reference to the Democratic party's surplus of unity was in response to a recent plea by a Republican presidential aspirant that the Republican party be returned to power. Steagall did not name the candidate, but said he hoped each party would continue strong enough to oppose policies of the other.

Steagall said he believed the assessment charged banks by the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation could be lowered, and that accounts of depositors could be insured up to $10,000. They are now insured up to $5,000.

WALLACE SEEKS GREATER POWER IN FARM LOANS

May Replace Agency Chairman Soon.

BY JOHN FISHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace is grasping for complete control of the 3 billion dollar farm credit administration, with White House support, it developed today.

Dr. A. G. Black may head farm credit agency.

An exchange of letters between President Roosevelt and F. F. Hill, chairman of the FCA, is expected to disclose Hill's resignation and enable Wallace to select a man of his liking and take over the agency, which since last spring has technically been under the department of agriculture, but whose independence was guaranteed by Wallace with the consent of the President.

Dr. A. G. Black, director of the agriculture department's marketing and regulatory service, is Wallace's choice for the credit agency post, according to usually reliable sources.

Report Wallace Dissatisfied.

Now it appears, however, that Wallace and other officials have become dissatisfied with the handling of farm loans by the FCA and wish to use the agency's resources for the department's leading program, arguing that the need for rural loans was not met by the FCA.

Farm organizations oppose any threat to the independence of the FCA and fear the possible jeopardy of FCA securities if its lending resources are pooled with funds the department has used in its crop control experiments.

The FCA has outstanding about 3 billion dollars in loans secured by farm mortgages. The money for loans was raised thru the sale of bonds. The agency has a capitalization of about 160 million dollars.

FCA and agriculture officials declined to comment officially, but FCA officials admitted privately that "some differences of opinion as to policy" had developed. There were no personal differences between Wallace and Hill, it was said.

Early Hints at Resignation.

The strongest hint that Hill would resign came from Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President.

"The reorganization act put the FCA under the directorship or jurisdiction of the secretary of agriculture," Early said. "But, by a sort of agreement between the chairman of the FCA and the secretary, it has been given more of an independent status than the secretary thinks it should continue to have.

"The secretary takes the position that since he is responsible for the agency, he ought to have control of it. There is a difference of opinion between agricultural organizations as to whether it should be free or kept independent, but the tendency of reorganization is to merge and reduce the independent agencies and no exception was taken on this."

Will Report to President.

Asked if any announcement regarding the resignation of Hill could be expected, Early replied: "If Hill resigns he will resign to President Roosevelt, the President having appointed him. If and when he resigns he will do so by letter."

In opposition to the move the National Coöperative council has sent a statement to its 4,000 farmer-coöperative member organizations, urging restoration of the independent status of the FCA. The position was taken that the FCA was organized to make farm loans on a sound, long term basis while the department of agriculture's program was set up to meet a temporary emergency and was not as businesslike as the FCA in making loans.

Stocks, Bonds

New York Stocks.

New York, Dec. 14 [Special].—Stocks sold off in late dealings today after an early move to extend yesterday's gains. Closing prices were irregularly lower, with fractional changes the rule. Volume of 887,450 shares, compared with 1,061,150 yesterday. One-third of the day's trading occurred during the relative strength of the first hour.

Weakness in the commodity markets was considered a direct influence in stalling stocks' advance.

Standard industrial issues—including United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Anaconda, and United States Rubber — closed lower. Chrysler worked higher. Oils gave a steady performance, with Texas corporation, Pure Oil, and Richfield adding small fractions.

Aviations closed irregular in a narrow range. On the upside were Lockheed, Douglas, United Aircraft, North American Aviation, and Sperry. Curtiss-Wright, Glenn Martin, Consolidated Aircraft, and Boeing gave ground.

New York Bonds.

New York, Dec. 14 (AP).—Bond buyers turned attention to industrial liens today, sending prices of these issues higher while other loans held about unchanged. United States governments largely were ignored and ended the day 13-32ds of a point higher to 11-32ds lower.

International Hydro-Electric 6s gained 4 points. Corporate issues advancing major fractions or more included American and Foreign Power 5s, International Telephone 5s, Northern Pacific 4s, Studebaker 6s, Youngstown Sheet and Tube 4s, Pacific Gas 3¾s, and Commonwealth Edison 3½s.

In the foreign list large gains were made by selected issues.

Chicago Stocks.

Fractional gains predominated on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Commonwealth Edison, Middle West, Abbott Laboratories, and Borg-Warner advanced slightly.

Central Illinois Public Service preferred and Kentucky Utilities 6 per cent and junior preferred issues reached new peaks for the year.

Trading in preferred stock of the National Battery company will be resumed today on the exchange. Transactions may be made only in "uncalled" shares, the exchange ruled, because the transfer books for called shares closed on Dec. 11. Any of the called preferred shares may be converted on a share for share basis into common shares thru Dec. 27. Trading in the stock was discontinued on Dec. 6 pending clarification of the company's plan to call 1,492 of the outstanding shares.

Bank Stocks.

Most bank stocks were steady yesterday, altho two issues gained while another declined. Chicago Title and Trust advanced two points to close at a bid of 120, while Northern Trust was bid at 575, compared with a Wednesday closing price of 573. Harris Trust declined three points to 312.

FOOD PRICES DECLINE.

The labor department reported recently that the level of average retail prices of staple foods declined 1 per cent between Dec. 5 and 12 in 13 principal cities. CHICAGO LIVE STOCK

The range of hog prices continued to widen at the Chicago stock yards yesterday. Light weights held firm while other stock slumped in value. Some of the heaviest butchers declined to new lows for the season.

Medium and weighty hogs bought mostly for domestic trade met narrow outlet at unevenly 5 to 25 cents lower prices.

DEMAND FOR TAX CUT MAY IMPERIL COUNTY FINANCES

Plea Based on Decline in Hotel Chain's Profits.

Attorneys seeking a reduction in the county's claim of $1,098,756 for delinquent real estate taxes and penalties on three large north side hotels introduced evidence yesterday to support their contention that the taxes were too high compared with the hotels' earnings. The county, in opposing reduction, asserted that the earnings cited are not a fair measure of the properties' value.

Master MacDonald.

The hearing yesterday was held before Charles A. McDonald, master in chancery of the federal court, in his office at 135 South La Salle street. Real estate men are watching the case closely. If the reduction is allowed, it might set a precedent for other distressed properties and imperil the county's tax revenues.

Assail Federal Interference.

The county, thru Francis Clamitz, assistant state's attorney, contends there should be no interference with tax collections and that the properties should be taken from federal court jurisdiction and returned to state courts.

The hotels involved are the Webster, 2150 Lincoln Park West; the Belden Stratford, 2300 Lincoln Park West, and the Parkway, 2100 Lincoln Park West. They are controled by Lott Hotels, Inc., which wants the back taxes—owing for the years 1928 to 1938, inclusive—scaled down as part of the company's reorganization in the federal court under section 77B of the federal bankruptcy act.

William J. Sweeney, a certified public accountant, testified that the hotels' profits, before fixed charges, in the years 1928 to 1938, inclusive, totaled $1,466,560. Fixed charges include taxes and bond interest. The real estate and personal property taxes for these years, exclusive of penalties, amount to $1,065,519.

Recalls Large 1928 Profit.

According to Sweeney, the hotels showed a profit of $419,484 in 1928, before deduction of fixed charges.

"What happened to that money?" Clamitz asked.

"I suppose it was spent for various purposes," the witness replied, "such as expenses of administration and receiverships, in addition to paying bond interest.

The hearing was continued to Dec. 21 at 10 a. m.

Illinois Central Suburban Service Gains in November

Suburban service on the Illinois Central electric trains showed an increase of 3.6 per cent in November over the corresponding month of 1938, the road reported yesterday. A total of 2,402,914 passengers rode the trains, compared with 2,319,415 in November last year.

Day by Day on the Farm by BOB BECKER

Yuletide on the Farm.

Dec. 14, 1939.

WITH only a little more than a week until Christmas, there are many signs of the holiday season in American cities. Crowds rushing to complete their shopping, Christmas trees on sale in grocery stores and corner lots, hundreds of Santas in stores and streets, and Christmas carols being broadcast over the radio. But the cities have no monopoly on signs of the approaching Yule season, as we noticed when we visited the DuPage county farm this week.

When we chatted with some of the workers near a farm cottage there was talk about the Christmas menu, because some years each of the farm families receives a turkey and other years a goose. Inside the cottage one of the farm women was working on a hooked rug which has to be completed in a few days so it can be given to a friend for Christmas.

Youngsters Excited.

Already the youngsters on the farm are excited about the prospective visit of Santa Claus, and in each family there have been several conferences about decorating the Christmas tree and making other preparations for Santa's annual visit.

Even in the fields and woods the Christmas theme is noticeable. As we walked into one woodlot in the center of the farm a cheerful cardinal dressed in the gay red which is so typical of the holiday season, flashed thru the thicket. And in another section of the farm a flock of sheep, slowly grazing in their field, reminded us of the holiday season, because many of them have bells around their necks which tinkle with each step.

Of course all the farm families are hoping that there will be snow on the ground for the Christmas season. Some of the farm youngsters have placed an order with Santa Claus for sleds and skates, and they need some colder weather and snow in order to use these gifts providing Santa comes thru as expected. But in the barnyard there already is a blanket of imitation snow. The Muscovy ducks have been moulting, and their white feathers cover the barnyard almost as effectively as snow.

Name for a Stream.

The men on the DuPage county farm have been holding a little contest to select a name for the new "river" which winds thru the farm.

This little canal, or artificial stream, was dug to connect two of the ponds which are a part of the farm waterway system. One of the boys thinks the canal should be called the "Swanee river" because the big black swans which live on the farm were the first to swim in it.

The swans are no longer on the "Swanee river" these days. The men have put them in their winter quarters at the edge of the largest pond. In their winter home the birds have a large concrete tank which is always full of water so they can swim in comfort whenever they please.

Sometimes the black swans don't get along very well with the white swans, but when we visited these birds the other day there was no evidence of ill feeling. The white swans were loafing and swimming in their end of the house and the black swans were minding their own business in their part of the building.

LIBBY EARNINGS GAIN; DISCLOSE CAPITAL PLANS

Shareholders' Meeting Is Called for Jan. 12.

Libby, McNeil & Libby and subsidiary companies issued an interim report yesterday showing earnings totaled $2,670,133 during the period from Feb. 25 to Oct. 28. Sales amounted to $49,685,061. No direct comparison is available. In the fiscal year ended Feb. 25, 1939, net loss was $3,354,277 and sales aggregated $66,306,931.

In a statement accompanying the report the company formally issued notice of a stockholders' meeting to be held Jan. 12 at Portland, Me. The company, which is engaged in food and meat packing with headquarters at Chicago, is incorporated in Maine.

Capital Revision Planned.

Stockholders will be asked to approve issuance of $11,000,000 of first mortgage bonds in connection with a refunding and recapitalization program. Approval will also be sought to change the authorized capitalization to 4,000,000 shares of $7 par value common stock from 100,000 shares of $100 par cumulative preferred stock and 3,353,999 shares of no par common.

Proceeds from the sale of the bonds will be used to retire $9,062,000 of 5 per cent 15 year first mortgage bonds, due Oct. 1, 1942, and to increase working capital. The recapitalization is necessary under the forthcoming sale by Swift & Co. of its stock holdings in the Libby company in compliance with a federal consent decree.

Glore, Forgan to Handle Sale.

Sale of the proposed bond issue and the Swift stockholdings in the Libby company is expected to be handled by a syndicate headed by Glore, Forgan & Co. not earlier than next May. Libby will probably file by the first of the year a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange commission covering the bond issue.

In the notice to Libby stockholders, Edward G. McDougall, president, asserted the interests of common shareholders would be benefited by elimination of preferred dividends of $583,800 annually and elimination of $9,730,000 of preferred stock in case of liquidation. The outstanding 5 per cent bonds would be redeemed April 1, according to McDougall, and the new bond issue would bear a maturity date of Jan. 1, 1955.

Average Earnings Listed.

According to McDougall's letter, the average annual earnings per share of common stock on the basis of the present capitalization would compare with per share earnings under the proposed capitalization as follows:

	Present capitalization.	Proposed capitalization.
Last 14 fiscal years..	$ .17	$ .28
Last 10 fiscal years..	*.06	.12
Last 5 fiscal years..	.44	.46

*Net loss.

Upon completion of the refunding and recapitalization program, the capitalization would consist of a maximum of 3,627,985 shares of common stock outstanding, and the new first mortgage bonds.

RELATES MORGAN PLAN TO FIGHT MONOPOLY QUIZ

Mitchell Denies 'Corner' in Floating Issues.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14 (AP).—The monopoly committee received testimony today that the "House of Morgan" began preparations more than a year ago to "answer a charge of monopoly" in the investment banking field.

Charles E. Mitchell.

Charles E. Mitchell, Wall street veteran, offered this testimony and at the same time emphatically denied any such monopoly existed.

"My long experience in Wall street tells me that the investment banking field is a dog fight," Mitchell said. "There is no monopoly about it."

Senator O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.], chairman, and some other committee members indicated they took a different view of the mass of evidence about relationships between syndicates of investment bankers and the J. P. Morgan interests.

Raises Monopoly Question.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general and committee member, said some "suspicious minded persons" might regard reciprocal arrangements between investment bankers to share the underwriting of security issues as "evidence of monopoly" or "combinations in restraint of trade."

Mitchell, denying these suggestions, surprised committee members by praising the 1933 banking act which prohibits deposit banks from originating, underwriting or selling securities.

"I didn't think so at the time," Mitchell said. "But if we'd gone along with bank affiliates [selling securities] we'd have worked toward a monopoly in investment banking."

Before the 1933 law was enacted Mitchell served as head of the National City Bank of New York City and its securities affiliate, the National City company. Now he is head of the New York office of Blyth & Co., investment bankers.

Prepare for Monopoly Quiz.

In a letter to his partner, Charles R. Blyth of San Francisco, on Aug. 10, 1938, Mitchell related what he said appeared to be preparations by the Morgan companies to meet charges of monopoly. Mitchell previously had furnished a confidential summary of underwriting activities by his firm to Harold Stanley, former J. P. Morgan partner, who headed Morgan, Stanley & Co., investment banking firm established to comply with the 1933 act.

Mitchell wrote that Stanley sought the confidential information because the Morgan interests "thought they may be called in one day to answer a charge of monopoly, and that they are getting together as much information as they can to answer promptly any questions which may be asked."

Asserts Monopoly Unfounded.

The letter concluded that "of course, such a charge could not possibly be sustained, but these are queer days."

Earlier Mitchell had testified that Morgan, Stanley & Co. had originated all of the securities issued in recent years by the American Telephone and Telegraph company and subsidiaries. He described this as "nearly a frozen account" because seven leading investment banking houses always shared underwriting with Morgan, Stanley.

RESERVE SYSTEM REPORTS DROP IN IDLE BANK FUNDS

Total Falls 300 Millions; Brokers' Loans Up.

Excess reserves of member banks of the federal reserve system available for lending were reduced in the week ended Dec. 13 by $300,000,000, the federal reserve board reported yesterday. The excess reserves were estimated at $4,850,000,000.

During the week $500,000,000 was withdrawn for the purchase of the new treasury bond issue, but new gold imports and other factors tempered the reduction in the idle bank funds.

Reflecting the moderate pickup in stock market activity, brokers' loans increased $131,000,000 during the week. The total of $638,000,000 compared with $695,000,000 on the corresponding 1938 date. Gold holdings increased $56,000,000 to a total of 17 billion 464 millions.

Business loans of Chicago member banks increased 1 million dollars and those of the New York banks rose 8 millions. Detailed report follows:

AMERICAN PERFUMER.

Has there been a change in the organization of Coty, Inc? What connection is there between this company and Coty International?—G. Y.

Answer: In April this year two new companies were formed to acquire the assets of Coty, Inc., incorporated in 1922. One new firm assumed the name of its predecessor and took all of its domestic properties. The other company, Coty International corporation, acquired all the foreign assets of the old firm.

Stockholders of the former company received one share of common stock of new Coty, Inc., and one share of common stock of Coty International for each share of old common stock.

Coty, Inc., holds exclusive American rights until 1975 to use the formulae, name and trademarks for the manufacture of perfumes owned by the French firm, Coty Societe Anonyme. Perfumes, powders, and toilet goods are produced in the company's laboratories in New York City.

The new domestic company has 1,537,435 shares of $1 par capital stock outstanding.

After a net loss of $236,685 in 1935, the predecessor company earned $216,994, or 14 cents a share, in 1936, $516,077, or 34 cents a share, in 1937, and $636,402, or 41 cents a share, in 1938.

In the first three quarters of 1939 the new company earned $362,211, or 24 cents a share, compared with $206,223, or 13 cents a share, earned by the former company in the same period of 1938. In this comparison of earnings the effect of operations of foreign subsidiaries in the first two quarters of each year was excluded.

The new company paid an initial dividend of 30 cents a share on May 1, 1939, and a second dividend of 25 cents on Oct. 11.

SAVE TAXES.

I have been told that it is advantageous to sell stock called for redemption before the redemption date. The benefit is supposed to come from reducing the income tax on profits from the deal. How can this be done?—A. T. B.

Answer: A stock redemption payment is considered a partial liquidating dividend for income tax purposes, and any profit obtained by the investor is 100 per cent taxable as a short-term capital gain.

If the stock has been held for more than 18 months, sale of the stock before the redemption date converts the profit into a long-term capital gain, which is only partly taxable. For stock owned from 18 to 24 months only two-thirds of the long-term gain is counted, and for stock held more than 2 years only one-half is taken into account.

Thus, if a share of preferred stock bought at $80 in 1936 is redeemed this month at $105, the taxable profit is $25. However, if the investor sells it before the redemption date at $104, one-half of the profit, or $12, is taxable.

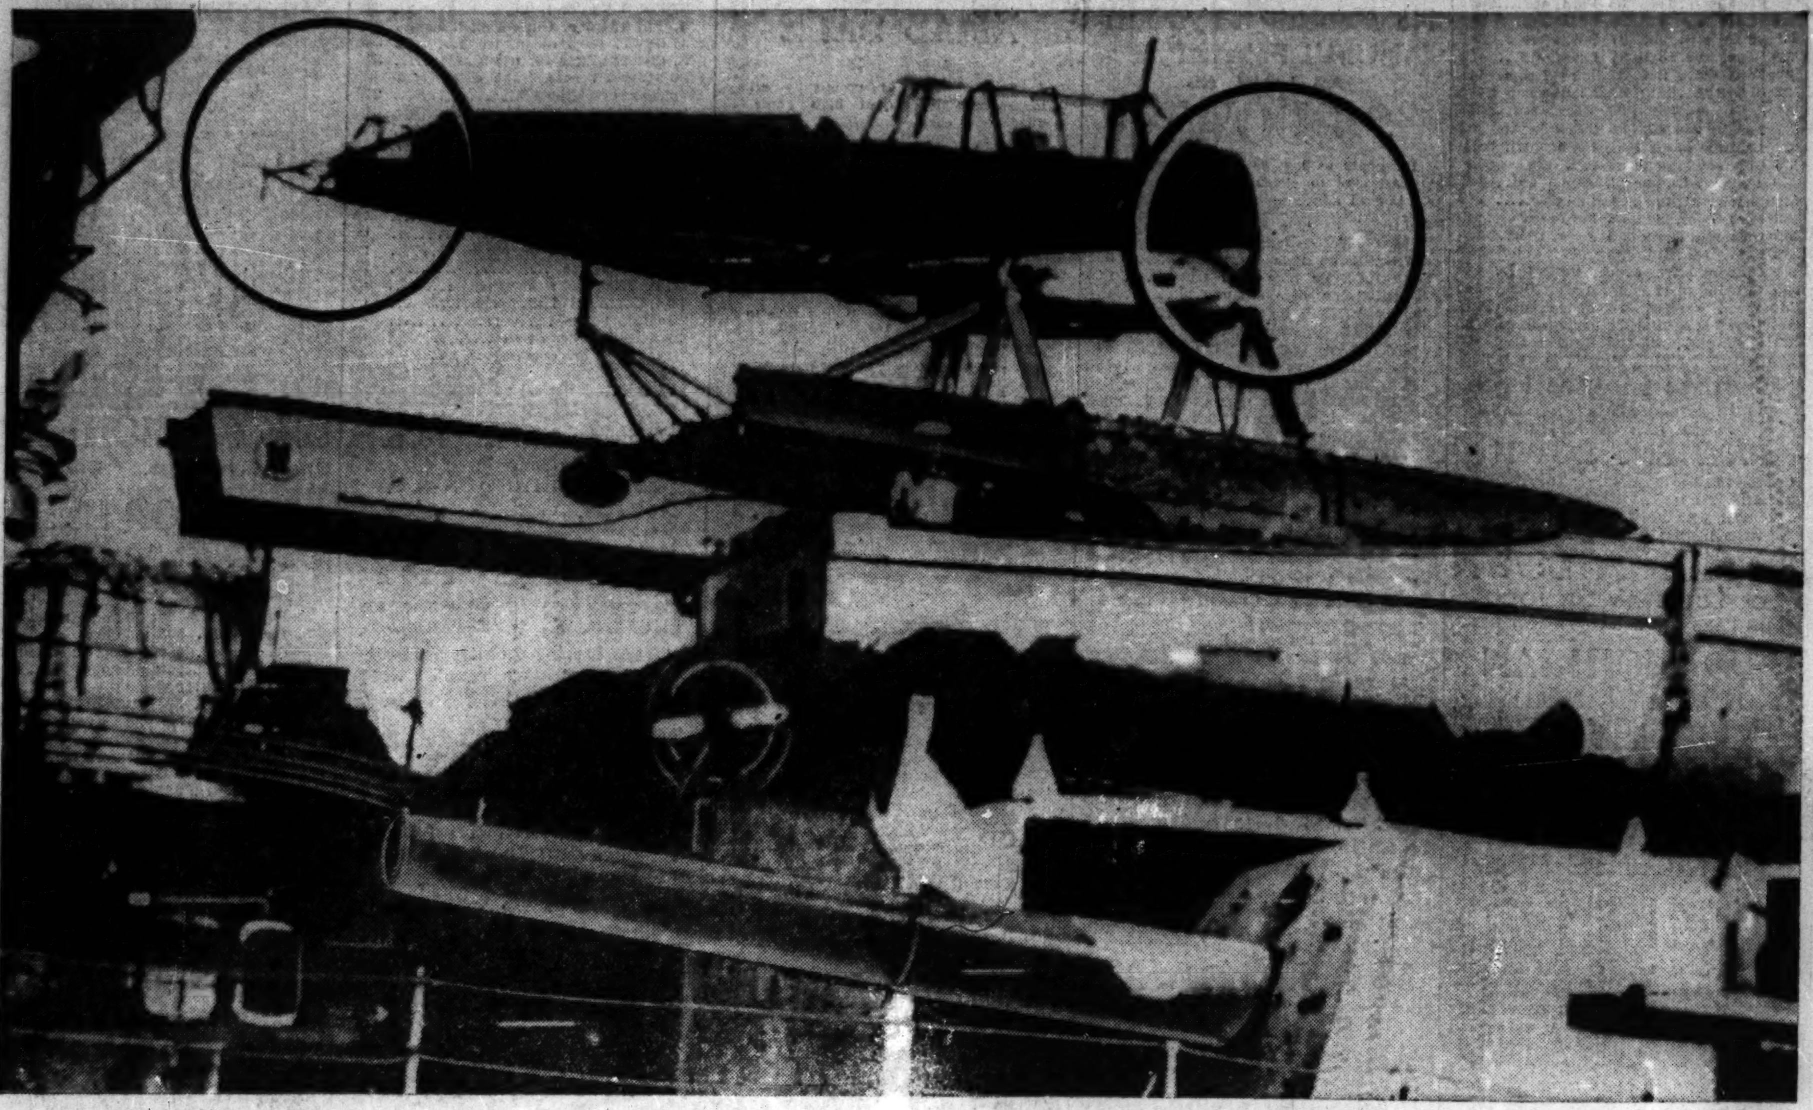
Uruguay Grants German Warship Time to Make Repairs—British Tighten Watch Over Graf Spee After Battle



British shells carried away both the nose and tail (see circles) of this airplane mounted on catapult on deck of German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee during battle. The Uruguayan government yesterday granted the disabled ship an extension of time in which to make repairs.

The German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee in harbor at Montevideo after battle with three British cruisers. The circle and triangle are drawn around holes shot in the warship near the water line. There was other damage to the raider, upon which 36 were killed and 60 hurt.

The Graf Spee had this hole in the hull about 60 feet from the bow on the port side. The edges bent outward, as if caused by an internal explosion.
